Recommended Adolescent Health Care Utilization: How Social Marketing Can Help

Fewer than half of adolescents receive their recommended preventive health care visits, which is cause for concern since adolescence is a critical time period when many risky behaviors begin to develop. The underutilization of services yields the missed opportunities for prevention, early detection and treatment. Health plans are assessed on their rates of adolescent well-child care visits through HEDIS scores, yet many are struggling to find effective strategies to improve these rates. Social marketing, the use of commercial marketing strategies to promote socially beneficial ideas, attitudes and behaviors, can help increase utilization of services and promote healthy behaviors among adolescents.

The National Institute for Health Care Management (NIHCM) Foundation has released an issue brief, Recommended Adolescent Health Care Utilization: How Social Marketing Can Help, reviewing the evidence on social marketing and describing previous social marketing efforts in health care. With the aim of informing and facilitating discussions on how health plans and health care providers can craft targeted messages for adolescents, as well as how they can utilize new media and technologies, the issue brief explores potential future applications of social marketing for health plans, providers and adolescents.

Join the Office of Minority Health (OMH) to Celebrate Minority Health Month, April 2009

Preconception health is the Office of Minority Health's focus for Minority Health Month, and this year's theme is Ordinary Couples Don't Plan Their Pregnancies: Be Extraordinary! The OMH is calling on state and local governments and offices of minority health to organize events and put forth proclamations to bring attention to importance of preconception health and preconception care for healthy pregnancies and the prevention of infant mortality.

In Minority Health Month April 2009, let's launch an arrow of awareness about the high rates of infant mortality in African American communities and the importance of preconception health and care in its prevention. That arrow will reach its target in September for National Infant Mortality Awareness Month.

Go to www.omhrc.gov/templates/browse.aspx?lvl=2&lvlid=182 to sign up to organize an event, request materials or view materials.

What are the Health Issues that Run in Your Family?

Your family health history can help your health care practitioner provide better care for you. It can help identify whether you have higher risk for some diseases. It can help your health care practitioner recommend actions for reducing your personal risk of disease. And it can help in looking for early warning signs of disease.

The Surgeon General's "My Family Health Portrait" is an internet-based tool that makes it easy for you to record your family health history. The tool is easy to access on the web and simple to fill out. It assembles your information and makes a "pedigree" family tree that you can download. It is private--it does not keep your information. It gives you a health history that you can share with family members or send to your health care practitioner.

It should only take about 15 to 20 minutes to build a basic family health history. Individuals with larger families will spend more time entering in their information. Then you have the option of sharing it with other family members, if you wish. They may help provide information you didn't know. And relatives can start with your information and create their own history.

Bureau of Family Health Grantee Committee Meeting

The next Bureau of Family Health Grantee Committee Meeting is scheduled for April 7, 2009 from 5-6:30 p.m. at the Scheman Conference Center in Ames. Minutes from the January ICN meeting and a tentative agenda can be viewed on pages 8-14 of The Update. This is a required meeting for Bureau of Family Health contract agencies.

What is a Dental Home?

The definition of “dental home” that will become effective April 15, 2009 in Chapter 50, “Oral Health”, Iowa Administrative Code states:

“Dental home” means a network of individualized care based on risk assessment, which includes oral health education, dental screenings, preventive services, diagnostic services, treatment services, and emergency services.

The Iowa Department of Public Health considers “a network” to mean both dental and non-dental health care professionals.

As a means to eliminate barriers to care, the I-Smile program approaches the dental home as a system that allows all children, especially those often excluded from receiving dental care, to have early and regular care and ensure optimal oral health. In order to do this, multiple health care providers play a role in providing the services deemed necessary within a dental home.

The I-Smile dental home is further strengthened through 24 dental hygienists working as regional I-Smile Coordinators to oversee referrals, provide care coordination, and act as liaison for families with community organizations and health care providers. The end result is a system to assure optimal oral health for children.

Modernization Focus on National Public Health Week in Iowa, April 6-12

by Don McCormick, Public Information Officer, IDPH

The theme for National Public Health Week (NPHW) in Iowa this year is “Public Health Modernization as a Foundation for a Healthy Iowa.” Public health partners across Iowa are encouraged to help raise awareness about how public health promotes and protects the health of Iowans. By educating the people you serve about how public health touches their lives every day, you will enable them to participate in the important discussion now taking place regarding the Public Health Modernization Initiative.

A new Web page is now available to help you prepare for the April 6-12 NPHW observance. Among the resources you will find there is the “What is public health?” series of handouts. Designed as fun and informative multiple-choice quizzes, each pertains to one of the five service standards outlined in the Iowa Public Health Standards. Also on the new site are event ideas and tips, a sample media advisory, a news release template, a table tent featuring the top 10 public health advancements of the last century, and more. Visit www.idph.state.ia.us/adper/nphw.asp today to start planning your event!
