PREFACE

This bulletin of poems for children to memorize and books for them to read represents a growth. Shortly after the publication of the Iowa Elementary Course of Study the Department of Public Instruction sent the schools a mimeographed list of poems for memorization in the elementary grades. This list was prepared by Miss Mabel I. Snedaker, Extension Supervisor, University Elementary School, especially for the use of the high school normal training classes. Its purpose was to supplement the literature unit of the elementary course of study. This list has been revised by Miss Snedaker and is included as Part I of this bulletin.

At the same time Miss Wilma Leslie Garnett, recently of the University Elementary School, consented to prepare a parallel list of prose selections which have been found in her studies to rank high among children's choices. Her lists, also the result of several years' investigation, have also been prepared as a further supplement to the elementary course of study and are included as Part II of the bulletin.

We express sincere appreciation to both these workers for the painstaking service they have given in helping the pupils of our schools to greater reading enjoyment.

AGNES SAMUELSON,
Superintendent of Public Instruction.

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

The memorization of poetry should add to the enjoyment of poetry. A memory list made up of poems children like is an important factor in accomplishing this result. To select poems liked by children and suitable for memorization was the objective in compiling the list which follows. Many of the poems in this list have been read to pupils in all parts of Iowa during extension visits to schools. The pupils voted on the poems liked best. For several years, teachers in Saturday classes have tried out lists of poems and reported those preferred by their children.

An attempt has been made to compile a list broad enough to meet individual tastes. The list contains many short poems for the child who finds it difficult to memorize. Many poems well liked by children have not been included because they did not seem suitable for memorization. Such poems belong in a reading list. However, the teacher should feel free to add any poems liked by her pupils, which she considers suitable for memorization.

Each child should be encouraged to memorize at least ten poems. This does not mean that he should memorize ten poems by himself outside of class. Some of the poems should be memorized by the whole group during the class period. The child may choose other poems from the list for his grade. All of these poems should be read in class, preferably by the teacher, so that the child is familiar with them before he begins his memory task.

MABEL SNEDAKER,
Extension Supervisor, University Elementary School, Iowa City.

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

The following compilation is not a complete list of the good books for children. It purports to be a rather representative set of lists for all grades from the pre-primary through the junior high school. Books of varying degrees of difficulty are included in the lists for each separate period in order to make provision for individual differences. It is hoped that the list will suggest much good reading material to the boys and girls of Iowa, and that through the reading done these boys and girls may unlock the doors to many joyous and worth while leisure hours.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The compiler of this graded list of books for children wishes to acknowledge her indebtedness to those who have assisted in the work. She is deeply grateful to the persons named below for the contributions they have made. They have given generously of their time and effort in the experimental work carried on in the field of children's interests in prose, from which work has come the list of forty-two titles of highly preferred selections mentioned at the end of this compilation. The writer offers this expression of her sincere appreciation to:

- Dr. Ernest Horn, Professor of Education, The State University of Iowa
- Mrs. Ernest Horn, Chairman of Child Study Committee, International Kindergarten Union
- Miss Maude McBroom, Principal of the University Elementary School, The State University of Iowa
- Miss Helen K. Mackintosh, Supervisor of Elementary Grades, Grand Rapids, Michigan
- Miss Bess Goodykoontz, Assistant Commissioner of Education for the United States

- Miss Mathilda Walton, Supervisor of Elementary Grades; together with a staff of six fourth grade teachers, Minneapolis, Minnesota
- Mrs. W. J. Kincaid; together with the following members of the staff of the Kincaid School, Houston, Texas. Staff members: Mrs. Paige McCullough, Mrs. Grace White, Mrs. Grace Dipple, Mrs. Florence Helm, Miss Florence Sherrard, Miss Janet Arendale, Miss Mary C. Hill, Miss Norma Forsythe
- The teachers of several fourth grades in Green Bay, Wisconsin, chosen by Miss Goodykoontz to assist
- Miss Harriet Dickson, Children's Librarian, Houston, Texas
- Miss Lida M. Williams, Director of Primary and Kindergarten Education, Northern State Teachers College, Aberdeen, South Dakota
- Miss Vera Lighthall, English Department, Northern State Teachers College, Aberdeen, South Dakota
- Miss Ruby Adams, Supervisor of Elementary Grades, Aberdeen, South Dakota
- Mrs. Mary A. Gill Walsh, Teacher in Atlantic City, New Jersey
- The children participating, from Iowa City, Green Bay, Aberdeen, Houston, and Atlantic City

Dr. Ernest Horn, as director of the experimental work, has been guide and adviser in all the studies made by the writer. To him should be given the credit of stimulating the work.
