Please Tell Your Stories

Recently I had the opportunity to hear a Veteran tell his story to citizens at our local library. Clarence Pfundheller is a Pearl Harbor survivor. He began his account by showing us some film footage of the attack, narrated by a woman who was a child at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941. There were excellent photos as well.

Clarence took us back to when he enlisted and told us about the ship that became his home – what he called the “newest battleship in the Navy at the time – a ship that had been built in 1919.” He laughed when talking about the peacetime Navy – called it a “wonderful experience” – and he told us about playing lots of baseball. Clarence remembers the good times of his service, as well as the worst times.

Clarence told us about the attack, how he remembered it went on for one hour and forty-five minutes and how all the smoke was hard on his eyes and throat. He told us about the Oklahoma turning over and the

Clarence Pfundheller

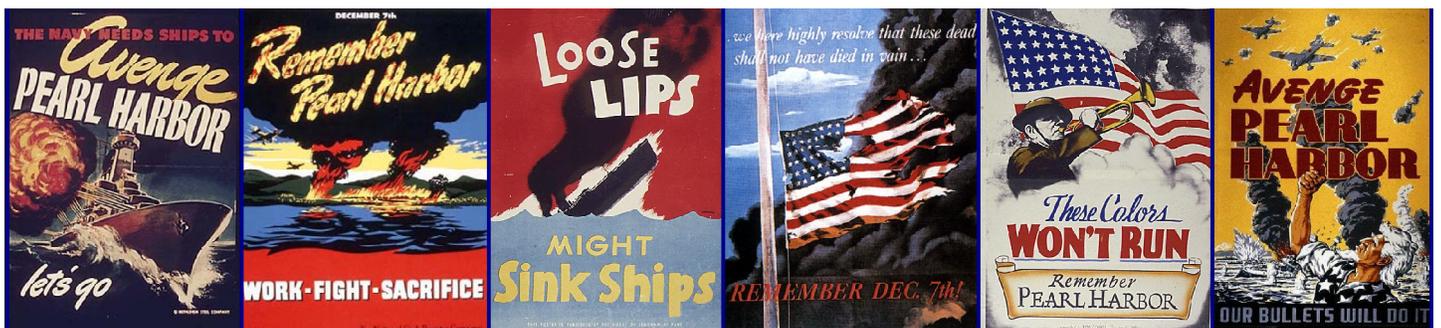

Arizona blowing up. He talked about all the oil and fire on the water. He told us how close the enemy was.

Clarence told us about his trip home at the end of his tour, spending a few weeks in the Philippines and then riding a transporter to the west coast. He was gone from home for five years.

Clarence ended by telling us of his recent trip back. A highlight for him on the trip was the 10 college students that went with him. They spent 3 days at Pearl Harbor and then visited some other locations, to include Hiroshima.

Clarence is a great inspiration. He continues to volunteer in his community, and he says he’s “still swabbing the deck three days a week.” Because Clarence was willing to tell his story, those of us in attendance have a better understanding of what these Veterans experienced. I, for one, will be forever indebted.

Honoring Iowa's Veterans

Featured Veteran: Floyd Teske

—submitted by Bill Schaefer

Floyd C. Teske was born July 10, 1906, on a farm north of Decorah. He was the oldest of three children. He will be 106 in July 2012! Floyd was living alone in Decorah until he came to the Iowa Veterans Home in 2007, when he was 100. He married when he entered the Army; he and his wife, the former Helen Holze, were married 32 years and had no children. He now has no near-living relatives.

Floyd entered the U.S. Army in May 1942 at age 36, and was discharged in October 1945. He told us during the photo session that his first Army job was as a truck driver, then he volunteered to learn to become a dental technician. Some of the battles and campaigns he was in included North Africa, Sicily, Italy, France, Holland, and Germany. His discharge document specifies that he was a TEC 5 MED DET 2831 ENGR C BN. His social worker at the IVH, Lisa Blabaum, said his records indicate that his occupation in Decorah was as a mortician/embalmer.

Floyd is hard of hearing, nearly blind, but sharp of mind when it comes to remembering the past. He has firm opinions about many things such as a deep respect for the English where he spent time before D-Day. The longer we talked to him, the more alive and spirited he became, answering our questions about his past and then asking us questions about ourselves. Floyd Teske is believed to be the oldest World War II veteran in Iowa.

Veterans History Project

The U.S. Congress created the Veterans History Project (VHP) in 2000 with a mission to collect and archive the personal recollections of U.S. wartime veterans and stories from homefront civilians who worked in support of our armed forces.

You can take part in this important project! Volunteer to conduct interviews and collect historical documents. Organize interview groups and teach others how to conduct interviews. Consider beginning with schools and scout groups, retirement communities, and churches.

Donated collections include war veterans' firsthand oral histories, memoirs, photographs, letters, diaries, and other historical documents from World War I through current conflicts.

By taking part in the Veterans History Project, you are contributing to the permanent collections of the Library of Congress. When you participate, you are making history. Visit www.loc.gov/vets to download an information kit, or call 888.371.5848 to request a kit.

The Faces of WWII, Clarke County

Faces of WWII Clarke County

Dr. Bill Schaefer, retired Grand View University Professor, who was recently featured in the last issue of this newsletter, has confirmed that the Faces of WWII, Clarke County Iowa photo exhibit will be featured at the Gold Star Museum, Camp Dodge, beginning May 1, 2012 and will run through August, 2012. Bill taught photography at Grand View University, Des Moines, from 1980-2009.

Dr. Schaefer is also embarking on a new photography project entitled Notable Iowa Veterans, a work intended to capture for posterity prominent Iowans who have served in the United States Armed Forces. "The goal is to show that military service lays the foundation for a life of service and success." He has already photographed Governor Bob Ray and has an impressive list of others that he has scheduled. If you have a name you would like to suggest for consideration, you may contact Bill at bschaefer57@hotmail.com or 515.979.3524. This project is expected to be on exhibit at the Gold Star Military Museum at a future date.

The Telling Project Comes to Iowa

Veterans are invited to share their experiences in a unique theatrical experience titled The Telling Project. The Telling Project produces "Telling," an experimental and innovative production in which military Veterans and their families, after extensive interviews, performance training, and rehearsal, stage the 'telling' of their stories of life in the military for their communities. The Telling Project promotes the belief that "the experiences of soldiers are a vital part of the nation's heritage, and as such must be both respected and understood." The project holds no political view regarding the military or its actions and rather promotes the belief that the experiences of soldiers are a vital part of the nation's heritage, and "as such must be both respected and understood."

The Telling Project has created full-length productions for live audiences numbering over 10,000 in places as diverse as Washington, D.C. and Starkville, MS. They have generated an archive of 350+ hours of in-depth interviews with veterans and their family members concerning their lives and the military. "Telling: Iowa City" was the 6th original production of The Telling Project and the first production in the Midwest.

On Veterans' Day 2009, the cast was honored to share the stage with First Lady Michelle Obama.

This is an opportunity for veterans and their families to tell their stories about their experiences in the military. The Telling Project and Working Group Theatre will work with veterans to create and stage this unique performance. Performance dates are tentatively set for March or April 2012. Those interested in sharing their experiences can set up an interview at the DMACC-Ankeny campus that will last approximately one hour. All interviews will be videotaped and archived.

For more information or to schedule an interview time, contact Nicole Shumate at nicoleshumate@yahoo.com, 515.822.5285, or Deborah McKittrick at dkmckittrick@dmacc.edu. Veterans Memorial Reborn

Monday, January 9, 2012 marked the official ribbon cutting ceremony of the renovated Veterans Auditorium in Des Moines. While there was an abundance of dignitaries on hand, many Veterans organizations represented, politicians and citizens alike in attendance – all eager to extol the beauty of the new building, there were also a few veterans in attendance who had once been invited to the dedication of the original Veterans Auditorium...

When the cornerstone to Veterans Memorial Auditorium was laid in 1954, it was one of the largest arenas and exhibit halls in the country – comparable to the leading venues in Chicago, New York, and Los Angeles. When the arena opened on February 1, 1955 it was named to honor the World War II Veterans of Polk County. And very quickly it became part of our Iowa history – hosting presidents and presidential hopefuls, musicians, square dancers, car shows, and high school athletics.

Construction of Vets Auditorium 1953

But back in 1953, a young guy named Don Appell, who had recently graduated (thanks to the GI Bill) with a degree in Architectural Engineering from Iowa State University, contributed a small part to a very big project. These are some of his recollections (at age 87):

“The city of Des Moines put together the auditorium project as a joint endeavor that included a consortium of many of the architectural and engineering firms in Iowa. I was working for the firm of Tinsley, Higgins, and Lighter and they placed me in the office that housed the Vet’s design team. This was also where I met and developed a professional friendship with Carlisle Peterson. We eventually formed a partnership firm: Peterson and Appell Structural Engineers. Carlisle was one of the structural engineers for the project. Made of steel, the main structural arches spanned 141 feet – and at the time those steel arches were the largest frame structures in the United States. (This measurement also happened to be the measurements of the wing span of a B-29 – an airplane I worked on during the war while stationed for 2½ years in Kharagpur, India.) While preparing the site, they found that the southeast corner of the site had an area that was constantly wet – a real problem. I designed some special precast piles to be used as the footings. Apparently they worked pretty well! And don’t forget that back then there weren’t computers. This building was designed using a slide rule!”

Don was honored to attend the public opening of the “new” Veterans Auditorium in January. He feels that the designers succeeded in preserving the integrity of the building as a “memorial to veterans.” There are eight kiosks in the new memorial hall that present a time-line of the thousands of Iowans in service from every conflict since 1846. The new convention center space has 27 meeting rooms, the state’s largest ballroom – at 28,640 square feet, a new outdoor plaza, loads of high-tech lighting, screens, projectors, and an abundance of stunning art. Memorial and Veterans Day ceremonies will once again be held at Veterans Auditorium.

President and native son Herbert Hoover launched his 1932 re-election campaign at the old Des Moines Coliseum – the main venue in Des Moines for four decades. It was destroyed by fire in 1949 which set the stage for what was to become Veterans Auditorium. One of Hoover’s quotes can be seen on a panel in the new Memorial Hall:

“Every generation has the right to build its own world out of materials of the past, cemented by the hopes of the future.”

National Guard Celebrates 375th Birthday

The Iowa National Guard hosted an observance at the Gold Star Museum on December 13, 2011 in celebration of their 375th birthday. The Guard dates from the first muster of Citizen-Soldiers forming the Massachusetts colonial militia on December 13, 1636 in Salem, Massachusetts. The program began with a history of the National Guard and included period reenactors wearing uniforms representing the 172-year history of the Iowa National Guard.

Current and former members of the Iowa National Guard together with veterans of the armed services represent the 172 years of Iowa National Guard service to the community, state and nation.

The Museum also held a sneak preview of its exhibit, “From Frontier Soldiers to Global Guardians: The History of the Iowa National Guard.” The Iowa National Guard dates from January 9, 1839 and has provided 172 years of service to our community, state, and nation.

Museum hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday; 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturdays. Group tours are welcome.

Honoring Washington County Iowa’s WWII Veterans

Over 262,000 Iowans served in World War II. It is estimated that we lose 1,200 veterans of WWII every day in America. In a race against the clock, a father and daughter team from Washington County, Iowa are gathering recollections and stories to be used in a book about World War II Washington County Veterans and their experiences during the war. They have begun their transcriptions and are working diligently to get them in print as soon as possible.

Cheyenne and Larry interview a Washington County Veteran

The project began with a granddaughter’s interest in her grandfather’s WWII service. Cheyenne Cuddeback-Miller’s grandfather was a paratrooper with the 82nd Airborne; he passed away in 2000. Cheyenne’s interest eventually led her to a major in Military History at the University of Northern Iowa. Many years later, she and her father, Larry Cuddeback, began their interviews. Cheyenne recently reported on their project:

“Washington County, nestled in the SE corner of Iowa, is filled with cornfields and small town charm. Its residents are generally simple, kind folks that epitomize quiet rural living. But among the farmers, high school football players and insurance brokers are members of the “old breed” — the WWII Veterans — the Greatest Generation. Their stories of wartime sacrifice, bloodshed, loss and victory are currently being procured into a timeless document, meant to carry their legacies onto future generations.

Since March 2010, the father-daughter team of Larry Cuddeback and Cheyenne Cuddeback-Miller have embarked upon their own great crusade — with the goal of recording the stories of WWII Veterans in the Washington County area. Once the stories are put onto paper, they’ll be compiled into a book (hopefully available by Fall 2012). As a “thank you” for his or her service, each veteran will be given a courtesy copy of the book. To date, nearly 110 veterans have shared their stories, which range from the sands of North Africa, the hedgerow country of France, the caves of Iwo Jima, to the mountains of Austria. Piece by piece, the story of WWII will be told through the eyes of Washington County Veterans.”

Anyone wishing to help with the book project should contact Cheyenne Cuddeback-Miller at 319.461.0889 or email at ccuddeback@hotmail.com. You can also hear an interview with both Larry and Cheyenne on Iowa Public Radio: http://iowapublicradio.org/news/news_story.php?story=3193.

President Taft speaks at Iowa's Soldier's Monument – built to commemorate Iowans who fought during the Civil War

National Cemetery Administration Commemorates the American Civil War

The National Cemetery Administration will host a series of commemorative events highlighting the historical heritage of more than half of its' national cemeteries that were created during the American Civil War. The first event was held at VA Central Office, with a presentation on the Bloedner Monument, believed to be the oldest surviving monument dedicated to soldiers of the Civil War. Topics included how NCA protected the fragile monument through conservation and relocation; and how a master stone carver created a replacement to continue honoring the soldiers from the 32nd Indiana Infantry with a new monument at Cave Hill National Cemetery in Louisville, Ky. NCA will hold additional events across the country through 2015 to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the American Civil War, which began in 1861 and ended in 1865.

"National cemeteries were first developed in the United States during the Civil War. Due to mounting war casualties, on July 17, 1862, Congress empowered President Abraham Lincoln, 'to purchase cemetery grounds and cause them to be securely enclosed, to be used as a national cemetery for the soldiers who shall die in the service of the country.' This small but significant new presidential power was given in 'an act to define the pay and emolument of certain officers of the Army, & for other purposes.' This was the first U.S. legislation to state and solidify the concept of a national cemetery." [Source: <http://www.cem.va.gov/cem/docs/factsheets/history.pdf>]

Iowa's Keokuk National Cemetery in Keokuk, Iowa was one of the first 14 cemeteries to be officially established in 1862. According to an 1871 inspection report, just after the Civil War, there were 627 interments; 600 known Union soldiers and 27 unknown soldiers. Not mentioned in the report were the remains of eight Confederate soldiers buried at the national cemetery, who died in Keokuk as prisoners of war. The cemetery is currently the final resting place for the remains of over 4,000 American soldiers. In 1997 the Cemetery was added to the National Register of Historic Places.

Note from the editor:

You may have noticed that this issue of the IDVA Newsletter has an abundance of articles and news briefs about World War II veterans. Although unintentional, neither is it a surprise. World War II veterans are very much on our minds. Of the 16 million American men and women in uniform during World War II, nearly 263,000 were lowans. It is estimated that there are now approximately 22,800 WWII veterans in Iowa; their average age: 88. And as our World War II veteran population dwindles, officials, historians, and citizens are faced with trying to preserve and clarify the history that our WWII veterans lived - before they have left and are silent.

The Veterans History Project (page 2) encourages families to preserve the stories of their World War II veterans...many who may have come from - and returned to - ordinary small American towns, but whose stories are filled with extraordinary bravery, heroism, and emotion. The National VFW oversees a project that records interviews with WWII veterans and preserves them in the Library of Congress. Locally, AIB continues to compile first-person accounts of WWII wartime service on Veteran's Day.

You will find lowans throughout the pages of this newsletter, who are taking up the call and giving local WWII veterans a voice, and in some cases - a face. There are things all of us can still do. We can listen to their stories and pass on tales of their greatness and inspiration to the next generations. We can make certain they are receiving all the benefits they earned and justly deserve. We can ensure that all of them who can - have the opportunity to visit their memorial in Washington, D.C. We can embrace these last years that they spend among us and honor them with patience, grace, and humility. And we can ask for their blessing by honoring the new veterans that have returned home - battle worn and weary as they once were.

PTSD Ruling Returns Benefits to Thousands of Vets

A federal court has ordered the Department of Defense to give a 50 percent disability rating to 2,000 service members who were diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder. The new order applies to service members who left the service before 2008, but had received lower disability ratings until now.

In most cases, veterans will receive back pay for missed retirement payments as well as medical charges they accrued since their discharge. Each veteran with a disability rating above 50 percent will qualify to purchase life insurance coverage through the Survivor Benefit Plan; lifetime commissary and military post exchange privileges; eligibility for Combat-Related Special Compensation; tax free retirement payments; and lifetime medical care for themselves, their spouse and their children up to age 18.

Social Media

Strategy Enables Returning Vets to Engage with VA at the Local Level

The Department of Veterans Affairs announced that all of its 152 medical centers are now actively represented on Facebook, the world's largest social networking site. “This event marks an important milestone in the overall effort to transform how VA communicates with veterans and provide them the health care and benefits they have earned,” said Secretary of Veterans Affairs Eric K. Shinseki. “...By leveraging Facebook, the Department continues to expand access to VA, and embrace transparency and two-way conversation.”

The process that began with a single Veterans Health Administration Facebook page in 2008 has now produced over 150 Facebook pages, 64 Twitter feeds, a YouTube channel, a Flickr page, and the Vantage Point blog. Additionally, in June 2011, VA produced a Department-wide social media policy that provides guidelines for communicating with veterans online. The overall strategy is designed to help break down long-perceived barriers between the Department and its stakeholders.

“Veterans of all eras are depending on us to get the right information to the right person at the right time,” said Brandon Friedman, VA's director of online communications, and a veteran of Iraq and Afghanistan. “With more troops returning home, we also have a responsibility to connect with the thousands of service members who have been – and will be – entering our system. They're using social media, so that's where we need to be. Facebook helps us do that.”

The VA currently has over 345,000 combined Facebook subscribers. The Department's main Facebook page has over 154,000 fans and its medical centers have a combined subscriber list of over 69,000. The Department plans to continue expanding its Facebook presence while also focusing on bringing Twitter to every VA medical center as well. Burial Benefits and Regulations

Veterans who served honorably in the U.S. Armed Forces deserve a proper burial. Burial eligibility and allowances, however, are complicated and challenging, and often need the help of a benefit specialist to translate.

Briefly, VA burial allowances are partial reimbursements of an eligible veteran's burial and funeral costs. When the cause of death is not service related, the reimbursements are generally described as two payments: (1) a burial and funeral expense allowance, and (2) a plot or interment allowance.

The VA website explains the following topics related to burial and plot-interment allowances:

- ★ What are VA burial allowances?
- ★ Who is eligible? Conditions that must be met
- ★ How much does VA pay? Service-related death/Non-service-related death
- ★ How can you apply?
- ★ Related benefits

VA's Home Loan Program Continues to Lead Mortgage Industry

Veterans have taken advantage of their home loan benefit in record numbers and as a result, VA loan originations have reached their highest total in eight years. Home loans guaranteed by the VA continue to have the lowest serious delinquency and foreclosure rates in the mortgage industry. According to the Mortgage Bankers Association National Delinquency Survey, VA's foreclosure rate for the last 14 quarters and serious delinquency rate for the last 11 quarters have been the lowest of all measured loan types – even prime loans.

In 2011, VA guaranteed 357,594 loans – an increase of nearly 14 percent over last year. There are currently over 1.5 million active VA home loans.

Secretary of Veterans Affairs, Eric Shinseki stated, “The continued strong performance and high volume of VA loans are a testament to the importance of VA's home loan program and to the skilled VA professionals who help homeowners in financial trouble keep their homes.”

Veterans and service members facing mortgage obligation problems can call 877.827.3702 to speak with a VA specialist concerning foreclosure avoidance. For more information about the VA Home Loan Guaranty Program, visit the program's home page: www.benefits.va.gov/homeloans. [Source: www.va.gov]

Mobile Vet Center in Cedar Rapids

The Department of Veterans Affairs recently deployed 20 additional Mobile Vet Centers from the production facility of Farber Specialty Vehicles to increase access to readjustment service for veterans and their families in rural and under-served communities across the county. These customized vehicles are equipped with confidential counseling space and a state-of-the-art communication package. They can also serve as part of the VA emergency response program. One of the new vehicles will be based in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

The new vans will expand the current fleet of 50 Mobile Vet Centers already in service. The Mobile Vet Centers expand the VA's reach to veterans, service members and their families – especially those living in rural or remote communities who are unable to visit a city-located Vet Center. More than 190,000 veterans and their families made over 1.3 million visits to VA Vet Centers in 2011. To find out more about Vet Center services, visit www.vetcenter.va.gov.

Veterans Day On the Hill - 2012

January 18, 2012 marked the annual “Veterans Day on the Hill,” sponsored by the Iowa Veterans Coalition. Hundreds of Iowa Veterans visited the Iowa Capitol and had an opportunity to meet with their state legislators, Major General Timothy Orr, IDVA Director Jodi Tymeson, IVH Commandant David Worley, ICVA Chair Todd Jacobus, and key policy makers – among many others. Veterans also visited with vendors about veteran-related services, and welcomed old friends and colleagues.

Maj. Gen. Timothy Orr, Adjutant General of the Iowa National Guard, addressed a joint session of the Iowa House and Senate on the Condition of the Iowa National Guard. You may read the entirety of his remarks here: www.legis.iowa.gov/DOCS/Pubs/hjweb/PDF2/2012/01-18-2012.pdf, beginning on page 95.

Sleep Out Raises $20,000 for Nine Emergency Shelters

Linn County's 6th annual Sleep Out for the Homeless raised $20,000 for area programs that provide emergency shelter and transitional housing for the homeless. The Sleep Out was sponsored by Linn County Veteran Affairs, Community Circle of Care, and First Presbyterian Church; approximately 364 community members participated in the event, including 194 who spent the night outside in cardboard boxes.

Organizers of the annual Sleep Out will present checks from the money raised by the 2011 Sleep Out to nine local programs. The following programs will receive a check from the money raised by the 2011 Sleep Out: Catherine McAuley Center, Catholic Worker House, Cedar House Shelter, Foundation 2 Youth Shelter, HACAP Transitional Housing, Mission of Hope, Salvation Army Emergency Lodging Program, Waypoint Services Madge Philips Center, and Willis Dady Emergency Shelter

The annual Linn County Homeless Data Summary Report shows the number of homeless persons served by Linn County emergency shelters and transitional housing programs has increased almost 30 percent over the last two years. Of the 5,802 persons served by local homeless assistance programs in FY11, half (50%) were children.

VA Opens New Cedar Rapids Outreach Center

The Iowa City VA Health Care System opened its new VA Outreach Center, located at 1535 First Avenue SE in Cedar Rapids, Iowa on February 24, 2012. The center will help homeless veterans and veterans at-risk of becoming homeless by providing a place where homeless veterans can wash their clothes, clean up, and receive assistance with housing support services, employment and job training, and obtaining VA benefits. The facility also has showers, a food pantry, clothing pantry, and other amenities. The new outreach center is modeled after one set up in Rock Island, Illinois in 2008, and in Des Moines, opened in 2011.

The opening of the new Cedar Rapids VA Outreach Center is one part of a complete VA mission to end homelessness among Veterans by the year 2015. Des Moines has a sister VA center located at 1223 Center Street, Des Moines.
