The History of Early Childhood Education

Early childhood education — the care and instruction of young children outside of the home — has become a downward extension of schooling. It is now the first rung on the educational ladder. In many respects, however, this most recent addition to the pedagogical hierarchy is quite different from its elementary and secondary predecessors. To read more:

RACE: Are We So Different?

Experience this highly personal and thought-provoking exhibition at the Science Center of Iowa October 10, 2015, through April 3, 2016.

People look different. Like a fingerprint, each person is unique. Each person represents a one-of-a-kind combination of their parents', grandparents' and family's ancestry - and every person experiences life somewhat differently than others. But are we so different?

This provocative exhibition investigates race and human variation using three primary themes: the history of the idea of race, the science of human variation and the contemporary experience of race and racism in the United States.

The exhibit includes:

- Interactive exhibit components
- Historical artifacts
- Iconic objects
- Compelling photographs
- Multimedia presentations

RACE: Are We So Different? is a project of the American Anthropological Association in collaboration with the Science Museum of Minnesota, funded by Ford Foundation and the National Science Foundation.

VISITING INFORMATION

Admission: Admission to the exhibition is included with SCI general admission ($12 for adults and $8 for children and seniors).

Group Visits and Diversity Training: SCI also has developed four group visit packages to provide diversity and inclusion training for groups of 20-250. View group visit packages and information

What Does it Mean for Children to Grow up in a World with Terrorism

From the abstract for "The Meaning of Terrorism"

"Hardly a week goes by in the United States (and to varying degrees, in the rest of the world) that the word terrorism does not appear in the collective consciousness, as represented, channeled, and shaped by the mass media in its many print, broadcast, and internet manifestations. While relatively few children worldwide (and even fewer children domestically in the United States) have been the specific targets for acts of terrorism, some have, and most are growing up in a world in which terrorism in its many aspects is a salient cultural phenomenon. This paper explores the impact of growing up in a world with terrorism on children and youth. It considers both the direct traumatic effects of being a victim and the indirect effects of living in communities and societies in which the threat of terrorism is on the minds of children, but perhaps more importantly, of adults generally, and parents and policy makers in particular..."

Excerpt from "Children and Political Violence:

Progress on the Pathways of Risk, Resilience, and Peace"

"On a staggering global scale, children and youth are caught up in political conflict as victims of politically motivated violence, voluntary or forced combatants and terrorists, refugees fleeing to safety, and targets of social media campaigns to radicalize and foment terror..."
