The document contains a submission statement, assurances, and a description of use of funds for services available to all infants and toddlers ages birth through two with disabilities and their families within the State of Iowa

The Child Development Coordination Council (CDCC) Releases Annual Report

The mission of the CDCC is to advocate for Iowa's children and families and support model comprehensive child development and parent support programs for children with risk factors and their families. The CDCC ensures the development, delivery, and promotion of quality, family-centered comprehensive early childhood services through:

- parent support programs which enhance the skills of parents to support the learning and development of their children ages birth to five years;
- established minimum guidelines for comprehensive early child development services for children ages three to five years;
- cost-effective child development services for children ages three to five years; and

- comprehensive services such as child care, transportation, family support and education, developmental screening, and referral to health professionals.

Federal Agencies Release Joint Policy Statement to Support the Alignment of Health and Early Learning Systems

The purpose of this Policy Statement is to support States and communities in their efforts to better coordinate, align, and enhance health and early learning systems to promote the healthy development, early learning, and well-being of all children from birth to Kindergarten entry in the United States. This statement is intended for State and local policy-makers and administrators of systems, agencies, and programs responsible for children’s health, social-emotional development, and early learning to understand their role and take steps to improve the integration of services for young children. The first years of life build the foundation for life-long health and wellness, educational achievement and economic security. A child’s health directly affects her or his ability to learn, grow, and thrive. Similarly, high-quality early learning opportunities for children have long-term positive impacts on their health, even into adulthood. Access to quality healthcare, nutrition, safe environments, and stable, nurturing, and stimulating relationships with parents and caregivers are each critical to building a strong early childhood foundation. Too often our health care and early learning systems operate in silos, missing key opportunities to maximize both the health and early learning outcomes of children. Coordination and alignment between health systems and early learning systems have the potential to help ensure that each child’s needs are identified, referrals to needed services are made and completed, services are not duplicated, and the messages that families hear are clear, aligned, and consistently reinforced to ensure that children and their families thrive.

The Department of Health and Human Services and the Department of Education Joint Interdepartmental Review of All Early Learning Programs for Children Less Than 6 Years of Age

Congress required the Secretaries of Health and Human Services (HHS) and Education (ED), in consultation with all federal agencies, to identify “all early learning and care programs for children less than six years of age,” provide specific recommendations for eliminating overlap and fragmentation among federal early learning and care programs, and make recommendations for streamlining all such programs. The Secretaries appreciate the opportunity to present an overview and analysis of the primary federal early learning programs and to offer recommendations on how to address the needs of children and families. This report also discusses the Administration’s efforts to maximize our current and future investments to increase the quality of and access to early learning for children from birth to kindergarten and how HHS and ED (the Departments) are fostering coordination and collaboration at the federal, state, and local levels to ensure a more effective, efficient, and high-quality system of early learning. A Bee Showed Me Limits are Lies

In 2016, filmmaker Jenna Kanell co-led a session at FPG's National Early Childhood Inclusion Institute with her mother, Gillian Gansler, and brother Vance Kanell, who was born with eight sensory disorders and who has far surpassed the negative expectations of medical professionals.

Jenna Kanell later delivered this popular TED Talk, exploring the question What would we be capable of, if no one told us we had limitations? The talk also includes her award-winning film Bumblebees, in which Vance stars. The family returns this year to lead a special plenary session at the Inclusion Institute.

Save-the-Date: Early Childhood Day-on-the Hill on February 28

Advocacy partners and other non-state early childhood system leaders are offering an alternative to the traditional Early Childhood Iowa Day on the Hill. As an organizational fair with the theme Early Childhood State Fair at the Iowa Capitol, advocacy groups, professional associations, and anyone with a passion for young children are invited to reach out to your members and contacts and invite them to join their elected officials the morning of February 28, prior to the Early Childhood Iowa Alliance quarterly meeting that afternoon. No specific program is being offered. Bring your stories and set up an appointment to visit with your local elected officials.

31ST Annual Des Moines Civil & Human Rights Symposium

"Poverty Affects Us All!"

March 15, 2017

It's that time again! On March 15, 2017 we will have our 31st Annual Des Moines Civil & Human Rights Symposium. The theme for this year's symposium, "Poverty Affects All of Us", represents and highlights the symposium goal, which is a wake-up call to all attendees on how poverty affects everyone here in Central Iowa and how we can affect change across Iowa to improve conditions for all. We have a number of great speakers to highlight issues and offer solutions on poverty.

We look forward to seeing you at Des Moines University in the Student Education Center. The symposium starts at 8am. Admission is free and that includes breakfast and lunch. Please register in advance so that we can have adequate food for everyone.

Making Math Count More for Young Latino Children

A new report from the Child Trends Hispanic Institute raises awareness of the need to foster math skills in young Latino children, and offers ways to do so.

Latinos now account for 1 out of every 4 kindergartners in the country; their early education is of great importance for them personally, and also has major implications for the future U.S. economy. Making Math Count More for Young Latino Children outlines the disparity in early math skills between Latino and white children.
