UNDERAGE DRINKING: NO 'MINOR' PROBLEM

We can learn lessons from the past, but we cannot live in it
— Lyndon B. Johnson

On a cold December evening, a vehicle traveling at speeds in excess of 90 miles per hour left the roadway where it collided with two utility poles before slamming into a brick wall and coming to rest on its top. The driver of that vehicle, a 17-year-old male, was killed instantly in the accident and a young passenger was critically injured. The teen driver's blood-alcohol content at the time of the accident was .204, two-and-a-half times Iowa's legal point of intoxication.

A Des Moines man stands accused of providing alcohol to that high school student. If convicted, he faces up to seven years in prison for providing the 1.75 liter bottle of rum that led to the teen's state of intoxication and the resulting traffic fatality and passenger injury. That tragedy serves as a solemn reminder of the dangers of underage drinking, as well as a harsh lesson of the consequences to adults that supply alcohol to minors.

The man who allegedly provided the alcohol to the teen undoubtedly did so, if true, without considering all of the potential ramifications. Such mindless acts, unfortunately, occur far too often in Iowa's communities.

In 2002, four minors from Wapello were killed when their vehicle burst into flames after missing a curve and dropping into a ditch. All four were intoxicated at the time of the crash, having received the alcohol from an aunt of one of the teens. And, in 2000, four students from Edgewood were killed in a vehicle crash after consuming alcohol at a party on property owned by a local elementary school teacher. Despite denying knowledge of the party, the teacher was fired after several students testified that she had visited the party site twice during the evening and ignored the teens' dangerous and illegal behavior. Sadly, far too many similar stories exist.

A nationwide survey of teens commissioned by the Century Council, a not-for-profit organization dedicated to fighting drunk driving and underage drinking, concluded that 65% of teens who drink acquire the alcohol from family and friends. In 2003, 2,834 youth under the age of 21 died in alcohol-related fatalities, accounting for nearly 17% of all such deaths on our nation's roadways that year. In Iowa, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, 34 minors lost their lives in alcohol-related traffic fatalities in that same year. Extrapolating from the Century Council's figure, that equates to 22 young Iowans struck down in their prime as a result of consuming alcohol from an adult provider.

Providing alcohol to a minor is a serious misdemeanor in Iowa and carries a minimum fine of $500. If serious injury results, the offense is an aggravated misdemeanor subject to a maximum of two years in prison and a fine not to exceed $5,000. If a death results, the offense is a class "D" felony subject to a maximum of five years in prison and a fine not to exceed $7,500. While no such legislation has been introduced in Iowa, several states are currently contemplating laws that would revoke the driving privileges of adults caught providing alcohol to minors.

Civil liability is an additional risk to adults that supply alcohol to underage drinkers. Under Iowa's host liability law, social hosts are not liable for providing alcohol to guests who become intoxicated, unless the alcohol is provided to an underage drinker. Simply put, when an adult supplies alcohol to a minor, the adult provider is financially responsible.

In the midst of high school prom and graduation seasons, adults should consider the risks before providing alcohol to minors or hosting underage drinking parties. In addition to the legal consequence, adults should be mindful of the potential risk to minors. While most parents are vigilant against underage drinking, some remain complacent believing that underage drinking is inevitable and a rite of passage. Parents that allow their kids to drink at home, rationalizing such behavior as a safer alternative than drinking at an unknown, unsupervised location, may want to reconsider the wisdom of granting permission to drink.

Rather than opening their homes to underage drinkers, I encourage adults to open the lines of communications with their teenagers. The Century Council maintains that teenagers whose parents regularly talk to them about the dangers of using alcohol are 42% less likely to drink. Only one in four teens, however, reported having such conversations. Facilitating discussions about alcohol abuse, underage drinking and drunk driving will help teens properly assess the risks associated with such behavior while, at the same time, helping adults comprehend the risks of providing alcohol. Adults should also be mindful of the example they set for their children with their own consumption behavior.

incident should serve as a reminder to all adults about the potential consequences of providing alcohol to minors. But above all, it should remind us all that underage drinking is no 'minor' problem.

Unfortunately for one Des Moines teen and one adult, the choices made on that fateful December evening cannot be relived. Perhaps the lessons from their past, however, can help others to make better choices. The tragic

Costs of Operating While Under the Influence

Though one last drink at the local tavern may only cost about $4 initially, the Iowa Alcoholic Beverages Division determined in a comprehensive cost analysis that an Operating While under the Influence (OWI) conviction would increase the cost of that last drink by more than a thousand-fold.

Combining expenses such as criminal penalties, legal fees, insurance premium increases and foregone wages, among others, the Iowa ABD estimated the total cost of a first-offense OWI conviction to be $4,435. The potential costs would increase exponentially if the drunk driving results in an accident, injury or death.

The Iowa ABD also urges consumers to consider the societal costs of an OWI before driving a vehicle while intoxicated. In 2003, 124 people died in alcohol related crashes on Iowa's roadways, and hundreds more were injured. Given the potential financial and societal costs, consumers, before ordering one for the road, should ask themselves, "Is it really worth it?"

For more information about OWI offenses, including a press release about the comprehensive cost analysis, the criminal penalties for an OWI and printable graphic that breaks down the potential costs of an OWI conviction, visit www.IowaABD.com.

The “Perfect” Martini? It’s a Matter of Personal Preference!

People have been drinking martinis for well over a hundred years. While this classic cocktail remains one of the most popular mixed drinks, it has also become one of the most controversial—at least when it comes to the “perfect” martini.

Is a martini only a martini when it is made with gin—or can vodka be used instead? Should it be wet (sweet), dry, or very dry? Should it be stirred or shaken? Should it be served straight up or on the rocks—with an olive (with or without pimento) or with a cocktail onion?

So before you start mixing a martini, be sure to ask the person’s preference. Then use one of the basic martini recipes below and adjust the ingredients and mixing method to suit his or her taste.

BASIC STRAIGHT-UP MARTINI

*1½ ounces chilled gin or vodka
Generous dash dry vermouth
Generous dash sweet vermouth
Olive or cocktail onion*

Pour the gin (or vodka) into a mixing glass or shaker half filled with ice; add dashes of dry and sweet vermouth (vary the amount of vermouth depending on whether it needs to be a dry or wet/sweet martini). Stir or shake gently to mix and immediately strain into a chilled cocktail glass over fresh ice, if desired. Garnish with an olive or onion on a pick.

BASIC STRAIGHT-UP DRY MARTINI

*2 ounces chilled gin or vodka
½ ounce dry vermouth
Olive or cocktail onion*

Pour the gin (or vodka) and vermouth into a mixing glass or shaker half-filled with ice; stir or shake gently to mix and immediately strain into a chilled cocktail glass over fresh ice, if desired. Garnish with an olive or onion on a pick.

BASIC STRAIGHT-UP VERY DRY MARTINI

*2-2½ ounces chilled gin or vodka
Dash dry vermouth
Olive or cocktail onion*

Pour the gin (or vodka) into a mixing glass half filled with ice; add a dash of vermouth. Stir or shake gently and immediately strain into a chilled cocktail glass over fresh ice, if desired. Garnish with an olive or onion on a pick.

After 43 years, Raúl's Mexican Food still a fixture on Des Moines' east side

By Derek Lippincott, Iowa ABD

With every bite of a taco and drink of a margarita at Raúl's Mexican Food restaurant, one consumes a bit of Raúl Hernandez's past.

From his childhood in Fort Madison helping his mother cater parties, to his nine-month stay in Mexico, to opening his Des Moines restaurant using only his wife's stove, Raúl's restaurant is a story of the man's living history.

Opened in the fall of 1962, what was once one of Des Moines' first Mexican restaurants is now perhaps its best known and most established. What started with a family stove, six booths and a makeshift tortilla dough roller is now a fixture on the city's east side. More than anything, Raúl's career in the hospitality industry began with a need for additional income and an idea how to earn it.

"They say necessity is the mother of all invention," Raúl said. "I had five kids and I had to feed them.

"I went to Mexico for nine months and I really liked their tacos," Raúl said. "On my way home through Texas I saw a lot of Mexican restaurants. I decided 'Hell, I could make tacos as good as they can,' so I went home and opened a restaurant."

Forty-three years later, Raúl's Mexican Food, now managed by Raúl's daughter Connie Hernandez, serves a growing clientele from average-Joes to state politicians. Many customers say it's the only Mexican restaurant worth its enchilada.

"People come in here for Raúl's food and margaritas that they can't get anywhere else," Connie said. "That's why we've been here for so long. I want to make people feel like they’re guests in my home rather than in a corporate environment.”

Several customers are drawn by the restaurant’s signature “Grandpa” margarita. Each one is shaken individually, which Connie said “takes an extra minute, but is well worth the wait.” The mix was hand-crafted to suit the taste of Raúl’s father, who perfected the art of margarita mixing during his service in the Mexican military.

“They weren’t called margaritas back then; they were called tequila con limón,” Raúl said. “When we started, he always told us we were mixing them wrong, but we didn’t think he knew what he was talking about. We started to mix them like he said and everybody liked them. By golly, he did know something.”

Raúl’s now bottles its mix and sells it retail, but Connie said she’s given customers the recipe and mixing instructions and they still can’t match the smoothness of the restaurant’s margaritas at home.

“The sign of a good margarita is that you can’t taste the tequila,” Connie said. “It’s got to be smooth. The thing that makes a good margarita is good tequila.”

Raúl’s Mexican Food has a wide selection of tequila – all high-end, according to Connie. The “Grandpa” margaritas are made with Jose Cuervo Especial, however, 1800 Reposado, Jose Cuervo Tradicional, Herradura, 1800 Anejo, Sauza Hornitos, Jose Cuervo Reserva de la Familia and Patron tequilas are also available.

“But some high-end tequilas aren’t meant to be made into margaritas,” Connie cautioned. “If you smell them, they smell like bourbon. They’re meant more for sipping – like cordials.”

Whichever the case, Raúl and BOTTOM: The back patio at Raúl’s Mexican Food is modeled after a Mexican bull fighting ring.

Connie will make sure customers receive their Mexican food and drinks they way they like them. In a city becoming more saturated with Mexican Restaurants, they said it’s important to continue to meet the demands of customers.

“It’s a lot harder to make a buck right now,” Raúl said referring to competition with seven other Mexican restaurants the neighborhood. “It’s not as easy as it was.”

As long as they remain unique, serve good food and margaritas and make customers feel at home, business will keep coming, Connie said.

But with 43 years of restaurant experience and a lifetime of heritage wrapped into Raúl’s Mexican Food, perhaps its most special offering is a bit of Raúl Hernandez’s past. ■

Refreshing, Fruit-Flavored Margaritas

Start with the basic margarita—tequila, lime juice, and orange-flavored liqueur—and add fruit to make one of the most refreshing mixed drinks you’ve ever tasted. Try the recipes below and then experiment to create your own favorite summertime sipper.

You can either shake the ingredients with ice or mix them in a heavy-duty blender for frozen variations. Serve margaritas in chilled traditional margarita glasses or large cocktail glasses that have been rimmed with salt (chill the serving glasses, moisten the rims with lime or lemon juice, and dip them into coarse salt or a mixture of salt and sugar). Garnish with a slice of lime or other fruit.

Basic Margarita

- 1½ ounces white or gold tequila
- ½ ounce triple sec or other orange-flavored liqueur
- Juice of ½ large lime

Pour all of the ingredients into a shaker; fill the shaker with ice and shake vigorously. Strain the mixed drink into a chilled, salted serving glass.

Frozen Margarita

- 2 cups cracked ice
- 1½ ounces white or gold tequila
- ½ ounce triple sec or other orange-flavored liqueur
- 1 ounce lime or lemon juice

Place the ice in a heavy-duty blender and pour in the remaining ingredients. Blend until slushy but still firm; pour the mixed drink into a chilled, salted serving glass.

Frozen Margarita and fruit

- 2 cups cracked ice
- 1½ ounces white or gold tequila
- ½ ounce triple sec or other orange-flavored liqueur
- 1 ounce lime or lemon juice
- Raspberries, peaches, bananas, or other fresh fruit cut into small pieces
- 1 ounce fruit liqueur that complements the selected fresh fruit
- ½ ounce sour mix

Place the ice in a heavy-duty blender and add the remaining ingredients. Blend until slushy but still firm; pour the mixed drink into a chilled, salted serving glass.

Slow Gin Fizz

Slowly but surely, gin marketers are seeing positive signs emerge in this classic spirit category

By Howard Riell

Editor's Note: This excerpt is printed with permission from the July/August 2004 issue of StateWays—the Beverage Alcohol Merchandising Magazine for Control States.

The gin business may be improving. After a period of drooping sales—which many attribute to the overwhelming popularity of vodka—its fortunes are perking up, albeit slowly.

With line extensions offering new takes on an old theme, gin marketers are looking ahead to better times and exciting prospects. . . . The category is “stabilizing,” according to Paul Campbell, group director and global marketing director for Pernod Ricard USA’s Seagram’s Gin. “I think the brands in the category are doing some things right and are really being more aggressive in marketing.” Campbell added that he doesn’t expect

“an explosion of gin consumption, but I do think there are some positive things happening in the category that would suggest that we are going to move marginally forward.”

OVERCOMING GIN STEREOTYPES

Overall, gin is generally seen by the public as being a less versatile spirit than vodka, Sumindi Peiris, senior marketing manager for Bombay Spirits Co. USA, explained. “Vodka has long been considered a more friendly partner to various mixers and types of cocktails.” . . . Increased awareness of the versatility of gin is necessary to overcome such stereotypes, Peiris said, adding, “It’s also important to generate awareness of the fact that gins differ according to their distillation processes and recipes.”

Michelle Chin, senior brand manager for Tanqueray, noted, “As we see an explosion of new restaurants emerging in the U.S. alongside new cuisines, it suggests that consumers’ desire for ‘flavor’ in their food is also translating to their desire for new flavors in their cocktails. This desire for flavor gives gin the perfect opportunity to become highly relevant again as it is one of the original cocktail spirits.”

FLAVORED GINS LAUNCHED

The [introduction of flavored gins allows] “us to have some news to talk about in our advertising and in our other communications programs,” said Pernod Ricard’s Campbell. “Universally across all white spirits, flavors are driving a lot of the growth.”

Michelle Murray, brand manager, Beefeater and WET by Beefeater for Allied Domecq Spirits, North America, added that products like WET by Beefeater “defy gin convention and bridge the gap between vodka and gin, offering a lighter, more refreshing spirit that is highly mixable. The continued growth of imported vodkas has also created a halo effect on imported gins . . .” Murray said she feels it is “hip to be a gin drinker . . . It’s trendy to give life to something that is seen as dusty and old. Classic cocktails—simple cocktails—are the consumer’s way of returning to what’s real.

BOUTIQUE BRANDS

James Bruton, marketing manager for William Grant & Sons, which markets Hendrick’s Gin, said he sees growth in the super premium or boutique segment. “We see ourselves as a single malt amongst gins,” Bruton continued. “We’re very different—we’re a Scottish gin, not English. We have the rather unusual infusions of cucumber and rose petals.”

A few years ago the London-produced Bafferts launched an unusual proposition for a gin. The product contains only 4 botanicals (versus as many as 19 in some gins) for a much lighter taste. The brand is brought into the U.S. by Wilson Daniel’s.

Quintessential Gin, from White Rock Distilleries, . . . is distilled five times, resulting in a lighter gin taste. The super premium Plymouth Gin . . . marketed by the Absolut Spirits Company in the U.S. . . . is triple-distilled and has a sophisticated gin (juniper) taste.

Fashionable and traditional, gin could be making the comeback retailers and suppliers have been waiting for. With new flavors, high-end activity, and a migrating consumer interested in new and different taste sensations, there’s a real possibility that this time it could happen.

Green Parrot Bar

key west

a sunny place for shady people

It's known as the first and last bar in the United States. Standing on the southernmost end of Highway 1 in Key West, the Green Parrot Bar has been a Florida landmark since 1890.

Every weekend, the stage features live music acts, ranging from zydeco and reggae to blues and classic rock. Musicians such as Maria Muldaur and the Red Elvises frequent the stage, always surrounded by the obligatory pool tables, video games and dartboards.

Conchs (locals) and tourists alike enjoy the bar's famed great drinks and bad art 365 days a year. On a given night, the bar's eclectic, open-air scene could feature anything from Monday night football to a poetry reading. Locals are intensely proud of the hangout's quirks, like Dwight Kalb's paintings depicting the place.

Whatever your tastes – new country or classic rock, ice-cold beer or spine-tingling cocktails, pool or darts – the Green Parrot is a prime destination for anyone visiting the Keys this summer.

You can find this famous watering hole at 601 Whitehead St. in Key West, Florida.

Gin—A Classic Spirit for Sipping and Mixing

All brands of gin contain at least a hint of juniper berries, one of the beverage's basic ingredients, but closely guarded secret blends of the extracts of leaves, seeds, roots, and barks used in processing make each one distinct. Take the time to savor the unique aroma and taste of several brands—sipped neat or on the rocks (over ice) as well as in these classic drink recipes.

Gin and Soda

2 ounces gin
Club soda
Lemon wedge

Fill a chilled highball (collins) glass with ice; pour in the gin and fill the glass with club soda. Garnish with the lemon wedge.

Gin and Tonic

2 ounces gin
Tonic water
Lime wedge

Fill a chilled highball (collins) glass with ice; pour in the gin and fill the glass with tonic water. Squeeze the lime wedge over the drink before dropping it into the glass.

Gibson

2-2 ½ ounces gin
½-1 ½ teaspoons dry vermouth
Cocktail onions

Pour the gin and vermouth into a mixing glass half filled with ice; stir well and strain into a chilled cocktail glass. Garnish with 1 or 2 cocktail onions on a pick.

VERMOUTH—THE INDISPENSABLE INGREDIENT

Many mixed drinks call for vermouth, wine that has been flavored with sweeteners, spices, herbs, roots, seeds, flowers, and/or fruit peels. Vermouth comes in several basic varieties—white (dry), red (sweet), and rose (semisweet), and enhances a wide variety of other ingredients with its distinctive aromas and complex flavors.

Try several of the available brands in these mixed drink recipes to discover which ones suit your taste. Be sure to refrigerate opened bottles of vermouth; the beverage will retain its aroma and flavor for up to a year.

Manhattan

2-2½ ounces blended whiskey
½ ounce sweet or dry vermouth
Dash bitters
Maraschino cherry

Fill a 12-ounce mixing glass at least half full with fresh ice; pour the whiskey and vermouth over the ice and add a dash of bitters. Stir well and strain into a chilled cocktail glass; garnish with the maraschino cherry.

Gin/Vodka/Vermouth Martini

1 ounce gin
1 ounce vodka
Generous dash of sweet or dry vermouth
Olive or cocktail onion

Pour the gin and vodka into a mixing glass or shaker half filled with ice; add a dash of vermouth (vary the amount of the vermouth depending on whether it needs to be a dry or wet martini). Stir or shake gently to mix and immediately strain into a chilled cocktail glass over fresh ice, if desired. Garnish with an olive or onion on a pick.

Rob Roy

1½-2 ounces Scotch
Dash sweet vermouth
Dash dry vermouth
Maraschino cherry

Fill a chilled cocktail glass half full with ice; pour the Scotch over the ice, add the dashes of vermouth, and stir to mix. (Or pour the Scotch into a shaker half-filled with ice and add the dashes of vermouth; shake vigorously and strain into a chilled cocktail glass.) Garnish with the maraschino cherry.

The Algonquin

1½-2 ounces blended or rye whiskey
½-1 ounce dry vermouth
1 ounce pineapple juice

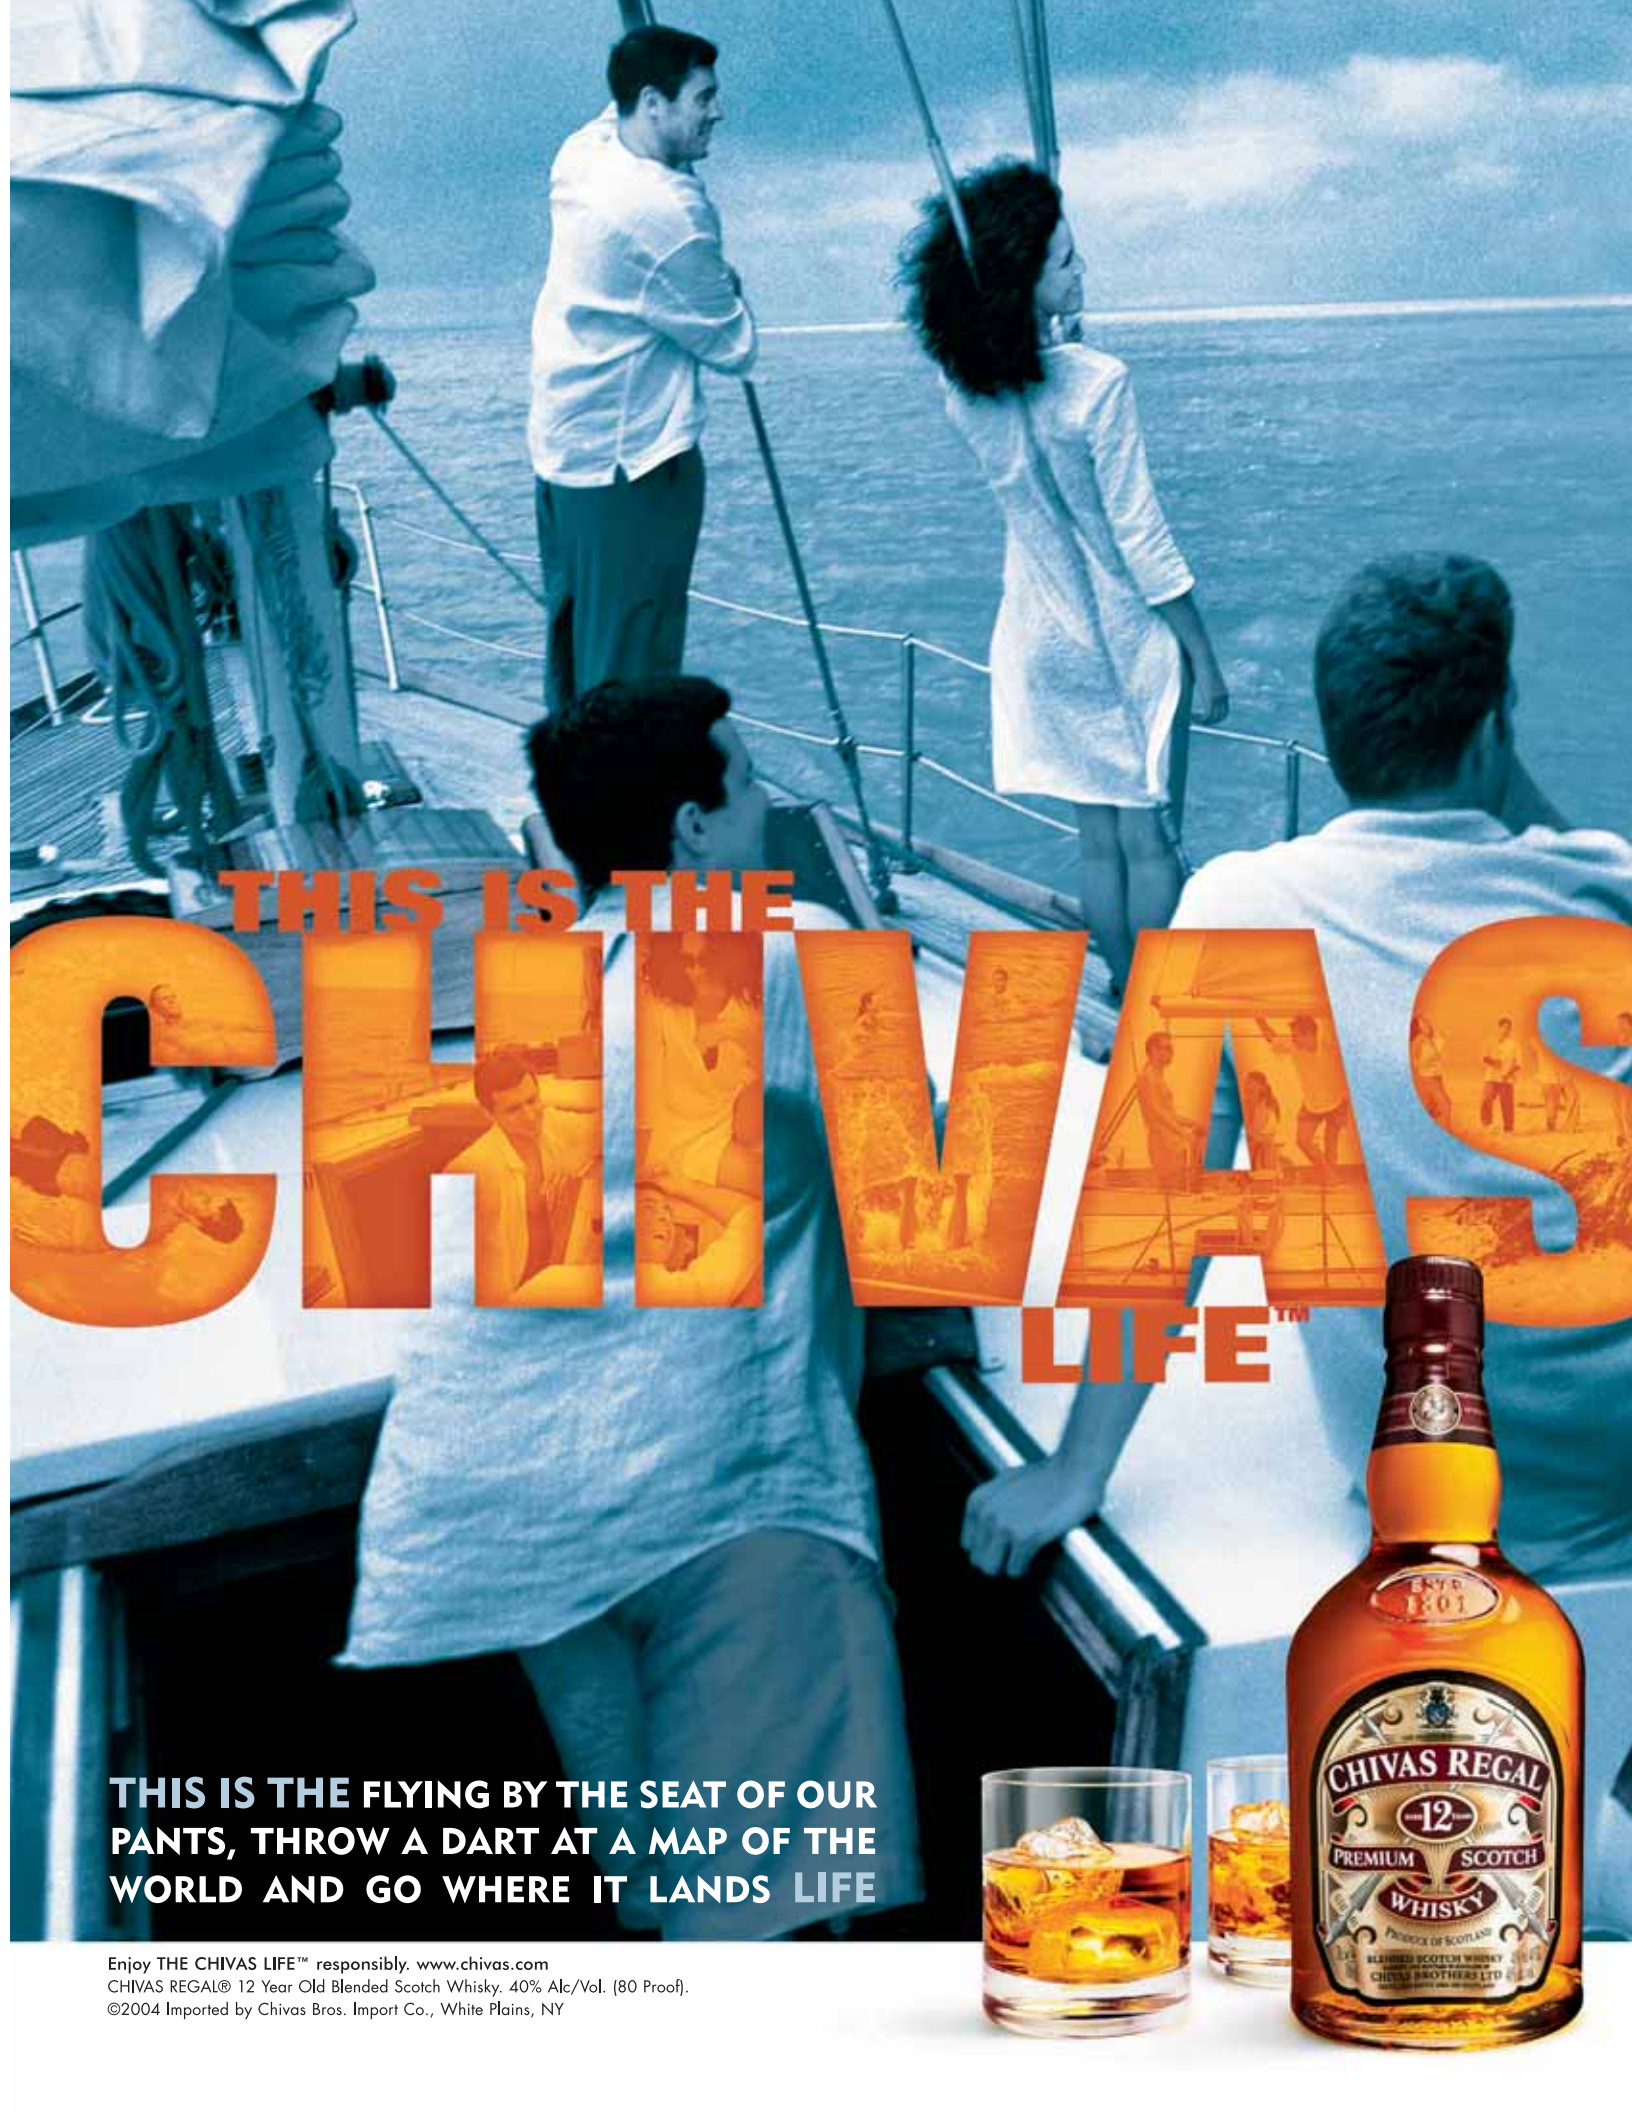

Pour all of the ingredients into a mixing glass or shaker half-filled with cracked ice; stir or shake to mix. Strain the mixed drink into a chilled cocktail glass over fresh ice, if desired.

Vermouth Cassis Cocktail

2½-3 ounces dry vermouth
1-1½ ounces crème de cassis
Club soda

Fill a chilled highball glass half full with fresh ice. Pour the vermouth and crème de cassis over the ice and stir; fill the glass with club soda (do not stir—the bubbles in the soda will mix the ingredients).
