Coffee with a Commissioner

Join us every month for an interview with one of the commissioners of the Iowa Commission on the Status of Women (ICSW) to learn more about how and why they got involved in women's advocacy. Each month we will focus on a different commissioner.

This month, I had the pleasure of interviewing Sherill Whisenand, commissioner and chair of the 2017 Iowa Women's Hall of Fame Selection Committee to talk about herself, her work, and the "why" behind the work that she does with the Commission.

Sherill Whisenand

Commissioner, Iowa Commission on the Status of Women
(Chair, 2017 Iowa Women's Hall of Fame Selection Committee)

How long have you served on the Iowa Commission on the Status of Women?

I was confirmed to the Commission in 2015 and will complete my first term at the end of 2018.

What was one of the things that called you to serve on this specific Commission?

I usually avoid organizations which promote one sector of the public based on gender, ethnicity, polarization and such. I view the world's citizens as global—the same, but different—and not to be segregated by any category. This Commission is an advocate much larger than its title implies. It has a mission and quest to benefit, nurture, empower and promote women. However, this Commission, sanctioned by the Iowa Legislature, encompasses issues for children, justice, equality issues, parity in the community. This Commission serves as a beacon to help Iowa families. How can you not be drawn to such a wonderful mission for Iowans? I knew Commissioners back when I was in high school and admired them, telling myself that one day I would be honored to serve on this Commission.

What is one accomplishment you've been proud of since your start on the Commission?

I have been honored to serve on the Iowa Women's Hall of Fame Committee which annually honors outstanding Iowans statewide for their commitment to the community, professionally and personally. The caliber of citizens who impact their Iowa communities is humbling. The underlying theme as we review the possible nominees is that they do not give back because it is expected of them—they give back because it is just what Iowans do. This year, I am chairman of the Committee and am excited to incorporate some new aspects into the event on Saturday, August 19 in Des Moines. We are on the lookout for great Iowans from Keokuk to Sheldon, Clinton and Council Bluffs.

What is an issue that affects women and girls that you are passionate about?

I have a passion for empowering women to become more active in government—local, state and federal. No matter what the media says about women's advancement, we will never be at parity in the political and governmental world until we quit seeing stories which start with, "She is the first woman to..." I strive to move beyond the day when women in service is an anomaly and not the norm. I want to work with our Commission to speak publicly about women getting on local boards, commissions, county supervisors, city councils, state house and statewide office. It ignites the passion for service and the ability to do good works for the good of all. Many women lament, "I can't." But in reality, it is, "I have no idea how to start." That is where my passion comes: to give them the tools to build a better community while building self-esteem.

What do you do in your spare time (if you have any)?

I am active in my local parish, St. Augustin Catholic Church in Des Moines, where I serve on a variety of committees and sing in the choir. I volunteer at the Des Moines Community Playhouse as an Ambassador and usher. My passion is politics where I have served at the local, county, state and federal level, most recently on the Republican Party of Iowa State Central Committee and four years as the co-chairman of the Republican Party of Polk County. I spend much-needed family time with my parents and sister, always in search of Mom's fried chicken or a piece of homemade chocolate cake.
