Iowa’s Summit on Family, Friend & Neighbor Care

In legislation passed in May 2008, the Iowa Empowerment Board was given the charge to conduct a study of the role that Community Empowerment boards can play in strengthening family, friend and neighbor (FFN) care to help achieve empowerment goals. One of the strategies that was set forth in the legislation was to host a state summit.

On November 10, 2008, over 100 individuals from across the state and across disciplines came together to participate in the conversation around research, policy & practice. Becky Burgart, Iowa Empowerment Board member, opened the day and introduced the first speaker, Dr. Charles Bruner, from the Child and Family Policy Center.

Dr. Bruner framed the day in the context of the following definition of FFN care, “care provided to a child because of the caregiver’s close, personal relationship with the family and child generally without payment.” He then shared national, as well as Iowa specific data around this issue.

Participants were also privileged to hear from national experts, Nina Sazer O’Donnell, United Way of America, and Sessy Nyman, Illinois Action for Children. They both shared lessons learned and successful strategies as they see FFN care receiving more attention across the nation. Iowa community examples were also shared, showcasing successful strategies in reaching this type of caregiver and therefore also supporting families in Iowa with young children.

The day ended with a facilitated discussion by Rae Anderson of the National Child Care and Information and Technical Assistance Center. Participants in the summit answered the question, “Where do we go from here?” The group was challenged to think of this issue as not supporting either FFN care or professional, regulated child care, but instead to find ways to recognize and support both types of care. Noting that approximately 35% of America’s children are in FFN care, this is worthy of continued discussion.

The Iowa Empowerment Board will submit its findings and recommendations in a report to the governor and general assembly in January 2009. The report, as well as information from the Summit, research and data will be available on the Empowerment web site at the following link:

Iowa Empowerment Board News

On November 21, 2008 the Iowa Empowerment Board (IEB) met at the Des Moines Botanical Center for their regularly scheduled meeting. After the approval of past minutes and the acceptance of the meeting’s agenda, Becky Burgart provided an update of the Family, Friend & Neighbor Summit which was held in Newton on November 10. The study of this type of care, as well as hosting the summit, were activities the IEB was charged with in 2008 legislation. The final report to the Iowa Legislature on behalf of the board regarding FFP activities and recommendations will be available on the Empowerment website in January (http://www.empowerment.state.ia.us/family_care.asp).

Shanell Wagler provided an update of the work of the Fiscal Accountability Work Group. The group provided a recommendation to the board concerning a policy for financial mid-year reporting by the local empowerment boards. The policy was approved. The group also shared an outline of the final Fiscal Accountability report that is due to the Iowa Legislature in January.

The remainder of the meeting focused on the work of updating the Iowa Empowerment Board’s strategic plan. The plan will be finalized and presented to the IEB in early 2009. Official meeting minutes can be found on the Iowa Board link of the Empowerment website, http://www.empowerment.state.ia.us/b_minutes.asp.

The next meeting of the Iowa Empowerment Board will be January 16, 2009 at the Iowa Workforce Center in Des Moines.

Nominations Sought For Iowa Empowerment Board

Responsibilities of an IEB member can be found on the Empowerment web site, http://www.empowerment.state.ia.us/Common/pdf/ieb_responsibilities.pdf

For additional information contact the Office of Empowerment

The Iowa Empowerment Board consists of sixteen citizen members, six state agency directors, and six members of the general assembly. The state Empowerment Board currently is seeking candidates for citizen members. Citizen members are appointed by Governor Chester J. Culver and confirmed by the Iowa Senate. Interested candidates must complete a gubernatorial appointment resume in addition to seeking a letter of recommendation from their local empowerment board. The gubernatorial appointment resume can be found at http://openup.iowa.gov/boards/.

Citizen member selections are reflective of the state's congressional districts to ensure representation from across the state. An equally important criterion is that appointments reflect the ethnic, cultural, social, and economic diversity of our state. We encourage candidates from diverse populations to apply.
Here in the Office of Empowerment we hear of so many excellent things happening for children and families across the state, we thought it would be beneficial to share a few with our readers. Each community empowerment area (CEA) was offered the opportunity to share a successful example within the areas of advocacy, results accountability or collaboration for this edition of the newsletter. Here are the local examples we received.

The Des Moines/Louisa Caring CommUNITY Board, with assistance from the Louisa County Advisory Board and local service providers, held an in-school provider fair at each of the local public schools at the time of the fall school registration, as well as the three private preschools in Louisa County. The Caring CommUNITY Empowerment Board provided a "bag of goodies" for those families with children age five and under. In addition, the service providers from Des Moines and Louisa Counties provided information about their services at each school registration. They also provided families with take home items and informational brochures.

The families were also given a survey to complete so that we could learn more about the needs of parents and families in regard to parenting skills and parent education issues. This information will assist the board as they do future planning. A drawing was held at each school selecting one family from each school to receive a thank you gift from Caring CommUNITY Empowerment.

All of our legislative reps were invited to our November board meeting and all four attended (Senator Tom Courtney, Rep. Dennis Cohoon, Rep. Tom Sands, and Rep. Dave Heaton). Four providers from DM/Louisa Counties shared a "success story" with the board and the legislators. The legislators seemed genuinely interested and asked some very good questions. We had a great discussion with all who attended the meeting.

When the Marion County Board of Empowerment agreed to lease space in Knoxville for the Baby’s Nest, the hope was that other community organizations would take advantage of its central location just off the Knoxville square and its availability at no cost to providers. This has proven to be true. In the first two months of operation, five different programs have used the conference room. Besides the Baby’s Nest parent education classes, AEA Early Access, Marion County Public Health, and Crossroads Countywide have all taken advantage of the space. The Empowerment Board itself has used the facility several times. This is an example of the strong collaboration that is traditional in Marion County.

FMC is embarking on a marketing/PR strategy. In December, they will be starting with name recognition PSA’s on the local radio station and an interview program that will feature CCR&R providing information regarding toy safety. Laurie Kristiansen, FMC Coordinator will script the program and ads and do the voice-overs. This endeavor will continue with themes for each month following, with the focal point being the FMC empowerment’s 10th anniversary. To further piggyback the effort, ads will also be placed on the FMC website. The kick off for this campaign was on Nov 28th with some general "spend time with your child during the holidays" PSA’s.

Corner Counties Empowerment Board collaborated with Southwest Iowa Home Health (Fremont County Public Health) and Michelle Bolander, a citizen of Fremont County this past fiscal year to offer an affordable CPR/First Aide training to all daycare centers and preschools within Fremont and Page Counties. The Empowerment Board had received feedback from the centers and preschools in regard to their ever increasing expenses that included costs for their staff to be certified in First Aide and CPR. The Empowerment Director and two Board members regularly attend the Fremont County 0-5 Coalition and shared this particular issue with other attendees explaining the financial hardship it had become for the areas providers. Through collaboration with the Fremont Co. Public Health nurse that facilitates this meeting, Michelle was secured to provide the training.
As she learned of the burden of costs for the providers, she offered her time to conduct the training on four different dates free of charge. Every daycare center and preschool within the two county region took advantage of this opportunity which reflects a true commitment to the children and families they serve. The only cost incurred by the daycare centers and preschools was for an instruction booklet and a certification card.

To forward the quality in preschool and childcare, Woodbury County’s Early Childhood Core Group (the sub-committee that makes recommendations to the Board) recommended that all Woodbury County child care centers and preschools utilizing empowerment funds be at a Level 3 in the QRS and use a research-based curriculum and assessment tool by fall 2009. The Board approved these recommendations. Woodbury County’s empowerment coordinator, QRS specialist and child care nurse consultant held required meetings in September and October for all providers affected by this change. Previously, all providers had been required to be involved in a quality initiative, though we’ve never specified QRS. Many providers already use an approved curriculum and assessment tool. This change will ensure that all children in empowerment-funded programs are receiving consistent education and quality.

We are not recovered, but we are grateful.

Seventy-two child development programs, serving over 7,365 children, in the Cedar Rapids area were flooded in June 2008. The child care capacity with major damage from the 2008 Flood (1,151 children) is equivalent to the combined student population of three elementary schools.

Knowing this, Child Care Resource & Referral and five giant steps early childhood initiative connected child development programs to flood recovery resources; SCORE in Cedar Rapids, Linn County Nonprofit Resource Center (LCNRC), The Cedar Rapids Area Chamber of Commerce and others. We gathered information and e-mailed/mail it out to flood-affected centers and homes. We invited representatives from SCORE and LCNRC to field questions from child care programs at a Flood Recovery Open House. Additionally, we worked with The Cedar Rapids Area Chamber of Commerce in listing child development programs with their Adopt-A-Business Program.

At the Open House in August, Jean Kruse of SCORE assisted a child development home provider in submitting an on-line application to The Cedar Rapids Area Chamber of Commerce, Greater Cedar Rapids Community Foundation, and community partner’s Job & Small Business Recovery Fund. In October the home provider was awarded $25,000 in a combined grant/three year forgivable loan. To date several centers and only one home provider have applied and been awarded Job & Small Business Funds.

The Adopt-A-Business Program matches flood affected business with individual or groups of businesses not directly affected by the flood. To date the program has matched five child development centers through their Adopt-A-Business Program. These centers have received advice, funds, space, sweat equity from volunteer employees, and/or moral support. One flood-affected child development center was able to replace their destroyed playground with funds and labor from their adoptive partner and donations from their pre-flood network.

Overall local child development programs have years to go in their recovery. If their immediate needs are not met there will be lasting and profound impacts on young children. Yet we want to acknowledge the business community for a few of their many contributions to child development centers and homes in a time of great need. We do not want to think about where our early childhood community would be today without the business community’s involvement in flood recovery efforts.
Preventing Shaken Baby Syndrome

By Amber Russell, Prevent Child Abuse Iowa

Although parenting can be joyous and rewarding, it can also lead to times of stress and frustration. As parents navigate the stages of their child’s development, they are constantly on the lookout for tips on managing challenging behaviors as well as reassurance that they are doing things right and that their child is on the right track. Early childhood professionals and providers play an integral role in providing this information to parents, whether it is about diffusing temper tantrums, strategies for potty training, or the importance of reading to children.

Unfortunately, some parents become too overwhelmed with the stress of their caretaking responsibilities, and the results can be devastating. In Iowa, 47 young children have died from being shaken or slammed in the past 11 years. This number represents a small proportion of the total cases of Shaken Baby Syndrome (SBS), including cases where the child lives with severe injuries like lifelong learning and/or physical disabilities as well as cases never brought to the attention of officials. In many cases of SBS, caregivers cite their inability to make a child stop crying as the reason for their violent response.

In the past, billboards and educational initiatives—often hospital-based—have attempted to teach parents and caregivers about Shaken Baby Syndrome and its prevention by focusing on the injuries or death that can be caused by shaking an infant. The primary message has been “Never Shake a Baby,” with programs providing additional advice about soothing infant crying—take baby for a ride in the car, walk and talk to baby—and putting an infant down safely in her crib and walking away if the stress becomes overwhelming. Ultimately, however, education on this issue has been sporadic and inconsistent, with no clear existing model to be adopted for future efforts.

Early childhood professionals can play a unique role in providing further education to parents about the stresses of raising infants and very young children. In addition to advice about coping with challenging toddler behaviors, professionals should talk to parents about infant crying. Research has shown that the amount of time an infant cries can increase from two hours a day on average for a newborn to peak at three or more hours a day by two to three months of age. This is when children are most susceptible to Shaken Baby Syndrome.

Parents can feel enormous pressure to calm their crying infant, especially when in public. Even in the privacy of one’s own home, the stress to calm an infant can be severe, and the resulting guilt or shame if the caregiver is unable to soothe the infant only increases this stress. Early childhood professionals should teach parents and caregivers about normal crying patterns and that sometimes crying cannot be soothed. Although the crying will often be associated with a need the infant has—wet diaper, hunger, wanting to be picked up—sometimes soothing techniques won’t work, and the infant might just cry. Crying also tends to peak in the evening time, when parents are already tired from the day and perhaps additionally stressed from caring for other children in the home. Professionals can teach parents that this crying is normal and that it will pass, and encourage them to seek help if they are feeling overwhelmed.

Iowa Association for the Education of Young Children T.E.A.C.H. Early Childhood® IOWA

How can we support T.E.A.C.H.?

Empowerment areas are terrific at promoting T.E.A.C.H. Early Childhood® IOWA as an investment initiative supporting their area’s early care and education workforce. Coordinators, Local Board members, staff, and their partners encourage providers and teachers to take advantage of the opportunity to pursue higher education degrees and credentials through T.E.A.C.H. Some Empowerment areas make special efforts to invite T.E.A.C.H staff to speak at provider events or mini-conferences. Many areas contact us regularly to obtain materials to distribute to programs. We appreciate the good partnerships!

“After we’ve tried this…what’s next?” Several of our Empowerment partners use flexible funding that you may have to encourage participation on the T.E.A.C.H. program. Offering professional development stipends to programs (maybe $200-500 per year per T.E.A.C.H. participant) gives the programs the opportunity to purchase the curriculum materials that college students identify as lacking in their classrooms. It gives programs a bit of funding towards the required raises or bonuses. It allows for flexibility in decision making about program quality improvements.

“Should we pay for the T.E.A.C.H. participant share or the center share of the T.E.A.C.H. contract?” We don’t recommend you do this, for several reasons. A participant is getting a great deal on T.E.A.C.H. – very few of them have out of pocket costs in any given semester. The contract between the participant, their sponsoring program, and T.E.A.C.H. requires some specific things of all three parties that are joining together to invest in this teacher. The teacher is required to make a commitment to their education and to the center. The center is required to support the teacher’s scheduling, provide release time, and assist with compensation increases. These investments represent a “buy-in” for the T.E.A.C.H. philosophy that we want to support a teacher/provider’s education, compensation and retention all at the same time. Sometimes an Empowerment area wants to “help out” a center or participant with their responsibilities. This actually can “backfire”, lessening the teacher’s commitment and the program’s buy-in for the components of T.E.A.C.H. We also do not and cannot collect money back that was paid by an outside funder if the teacher leaves her position at the center.

“But they can’t afford it!” Again, our experience is that most of our scholarship recipients have very little out of pocket costs, and the centers save money with reduced turnover and achieving higher levels on their QRS or other measures. If a center is losing money due to how they provide the raises or bonuses, or the way they offer release time, please suggest they call me or a T.E.A.C.H. counselor for tips on other options they might try.

“Are scholarships still available?” At the current time, we are accepting all eligible teachers, providers, and directors. (To be eligible, one must be working in a regulated child care program in Iowa, and be enrolling in an early childhood degree program.) As money gets tight, we may institute waiting lists again later in 2009. Please contact me if you are interested in supporting T.E.A.C.H. scholarship contracts with local Empowerment dollars.

Happy Holidays!

AAP Literacy Kit
This updated Literacy Toolkit is an interactive web-based resource designed for health professionals to encourage all parents to read with their children. The site is meant to introduce a wide variety of strategies and tools to support the mission of promoting child development and future school success. There are evidence based tips for parents available in a variety of languages for parents of all reading levels, posters, book lists for a variety of ages and topics, and links to many helpful resources. Many of these resources can easily be adapted for use by early childhood professionals.

Positive Behavior Support Releases Parent Modules
As statewide efforts to promote positive behavior support (PBS) strategies gain momentum in the early childhood settings across Iowa, a new tool has been released to help extend the benefits of PBS into the home. For the past year, an Iowa statewide team under consultation from the Center on the Social Emotional Foundations for Early Learning (CSEFEL) has designed and implemented training and coaching to encourage the adoption of PBS strategies in early childhood settings in Iowa. Now another tool is available to programs, a series of six modules that help extend the basic philosophy of PBS to home environments.

These modules are perfect for parent education events or meetings that are associated with the enrollment of their children in a preschool or child care setting. They are also ideal for parent support or home visitation programs. The modules help translate the basic principles of PBS into practical tips that parents can use to supplement activities in early childhood programs or create their own intervention project to address behavioral issues among their children. The materials include a facilitators guide and guidelines for engaging parents in conversations about the importance of nurturing positive relationships with their children, understanding the reason for challenging behavior and emphasizing teaching the skills necessary to behave.

The PBS approach is based on the Pyramid Model that encourages focusing on creating positive and structured environment and addressing challenging behavior by communicating clearly expected behaviors and teaching explicitly the skills necessary to follow those expectations.

The CSEFEL Parent Modules are available free (or will be very soon) at http://www.vanderbilt.edu/csefel/familytools.html. Programs considering using the PBS parent modules should have a good background in PBS by attending the preschool or infant/toddler PBS module trainings going on across Iowa.

I-Smile and PEDS 21

Trisha Willenborg, I-Smile Coordinator from HACAP, and Heather Miller, oral health consultant from IDPH, traveled to Boston, Massachusetts to share a poster on the I-Smile dental home project at the 2008 Peds-21 Symposium: “Something to Smile About: The Pediatrician’s Role in Oral Health” sponsored by the American Academy of Pediatrics.

The I-Smile poster presentation highlighted Iowa’s efforts to promote collaboration between medical and dental communities in addressing children’s oral health through the “conceptual dental home”. Trisha provided information on her role as an I-Smile Coordinator, including outreach to the medical community and providing training and education regarding children’s oral health.

The widely attended symposium was held one day before the AAP National Conference and Exhibition, intended to improve child health professionals’ understanding of the causes and prevention of early childhood dental caries, the long-and short-term consequences of dental disease, and the impact of dental disease on the individual, family, and community.
