A note from the Administrator

For over eighty one years, the Iowa Alcoholic Beverages Division (Division) has been administering the sale and distribution of alcohol in the state and, through the decades, our agency has certainly experienced change.

From operating state-owned stores that maintained ledgers on customers' purchases to the evolution of privately-owned liquor outlets, our primary focus has always been to efficiently and effectively deliver the products our customers want.

With this legacy of adaptability and change, I'm proud that the Division is already in the process of changing the ways we do business with suppliers and retailers. For over a year, we've been hard at work creating a web-based system that allows both distributors and retail liquor stores to conduct their respective enterprises more quickly and thoroughly.

The days of faxing or phoning orders at narrowly prescribed times are soon to be over. Instead, customers can log in and place their respective orders any time of the day or night from any computer or smart phone. It's like shopping at any other online 'store.' Customers can view pictures of various products and start filling their shopping carts. If, for any reason, a customer has to suspend his or her shopping, the cart saves the items already selected so that the process can continue when the customer returns.

The web portal – which anyone can visit at <https://shop.iowaabd.com> – is powerful in more ways than simply placing an order. Customers can retrieve information such as past orders and invoices and I can't think of a better way for all of you to assist your retail customers than to show them what's available from the Division.

Ordering

from the web portal is already taking place and the Division is planning a steady migration of all liquor store licensees over the next several months. Rest assured, we will be working with licensees to assist with this transition – including the deployment of trainers throughout the state to work face-to-face with anyone needing help. We also have tutorials on our website so that any user can return to for a 'refresher' course.

This web portal is the most recent example of our mission to ensure that the Division continues to respond to the needs of businesses and the general public. Improved efficiency means greater convenience for our customers and these improved processes will lead to considerable savings in operational costs, which benefits taxpayers. Other recent improvements include inventory and racking systems that enable faster order fulfillment and leasing (instead of purchasing) a new fleet of trucks that will run more efficiently – especially as we continue to use GPS technology for fine tuning routes to over 1,200 stores.

I look forward to working with many of you in the future as the Division continues to implement the steps necessary to provide a vital service for the state of Iowa.

Sincerely,

Stephen Larson, Administrator

PROGRAM MANAGER

How do you describe the challenge of managing the ABD web portal?

The portal itself is easily managed due to the technology we have in place with our vendor and partner with the Office of the Chief Information Officer for the State of Iowa.

Some challenges do exist when new customers come on board and aren't used to online ordering or have never used the internet to place orders. Fortunately, ABD has a "help" line if customers need assistance when placing orders, signing up for an account or managing their invoices. There are 8 master trainers ready to assist customers with any issues they may encounter. Plus, we've created a detailed FAQ so customers can answer some of their questions at the click of the mouse.

How difficult is it to implement new technologies within a government framework?

It's not difficult. Change is always a challenge wherever you are. The key is to gain buy-in from staff and to ensure they have the proper training and assistance with new technologies. We stress that just because things have 'always been done this way,' is not a reason to not keep moving forward. Change is good and the Division leaders are striving to move ABD into a smooth electronic future.

What is the most rewarding part of this project?

I find it very exciting to see the statistics on the portal and how many new customers have signed up and how many are using it consistently to place orders. We started with a minimal amount of online customers and now are up to 368 customers of 1290 licensees who are using the portal. The Division's goal is to have all Class E Licensees signed up and using the Web Portal or EDI within the next year.

What do you do in your free time?

I enjoy family time with my sons, Jaxon (8) and Simon (6) and husband Wes. We enjoy family outdoor activities and time together. I enjoy running, working out and staying active. I also love to read and shop. Time with friends is important and I try to catch up with them whenever I can.

CANADA ON THE CUSP

BY JACK ROBERTIELLO

Note: This excerpt is printed with permission from the January/February 2015 issue of StateWays—the Beverage Alcohol Merchandising Magazine for Control States.

CANADIAN WHISKY MAY NOT GET AS MUCH RESPECT AS ITS IRISH, SCOTTISH, AND AMERICAN COUNTERPARTS THESE DAYS, BUT IF WHISKY-BUYING WERE AMERICAN IDOL, CANADIAN WOULD DEFINITELY BE COMPETING IN THE FINALS.

After all, the entire category moved more than 13 million cases in the United States last year, second only to bourbon and Tennessee whiskeys among brown spirits. And while the category has a reputation for lower prices when compared to the other whiskies, the majority of the growth last year came from the super-premium pricing tier, according to figures from the Distilled Spirits Council of the United States.

For years, the Canadian category has been a steady if uninspired participant in the reawakening of interest in whisky. With a tradition that made “smooth,” “mellow,” and “easy” key words for the style of spirit most often associated with whiskies from the North, Canadian wasn’t perfectly aligned with the contemporary taste for more robust or expressive flavor profiles found in American, Irish, and Scottish varieties.

But recent signs of interest, especially by cocktail connoisseurs for the high rye expressions and new consumers for flavored expressions, have encouraged Canadian makers to pay more attention to contemporary tastes. “We all know brown spirits are seeing a big resurgence, and we’re seeing that as well in Canadian,” says Vicki Arcos, brand director for Black Velvet at Constellation. “Bourbon is getting all the attention, but we’re definitely seeing a lot of traction as well.”

Canadian’s reputation has always rested on its smooth and accessible qualities, she notes, and as a category has been reliant on brand-loyal male consumers. But now that flavors are such a huge trend in brown spirits, brands are finding success recruiting users from beer, cider, and vodka—as well as making inroads among female consumers.

“There are a number of trends driving awareness, trial, and growth in the North American space and among Canadian whisky,” says Yvonne Briese, VP of marketing, whiskey for Diageo. “The emerging popularity of flavored whisky was part of the inspiration that led to the innovation of Crown Royal Regal Apple. We feel this trend is a great way for drinkers, both men and women alike, to continue expanding their interests for not only whiskies, but also flavored whiskies.” She adds, “The growing popularity of cocktails among consumers and the resurgence of classics, such as the Manhattan and Old-Fashioned, provide consumers with more options and reasons to responsibly enjoy whiskies.”

Claire Richards, Director of World Whiskies for Beam Suntory (supplier of Canadian Club and Windsor Supreme), says, “This is certainly an exciting time for spirits, especially brown spirits. Brands are experimenting more to create new flavor experiences, and consumers are eager to explore different variants. Canadian whisky has a unique flavor profile due to its rye content, which is attracting a lot of interest from bartenders and consumers as they explore the whisky category.”

One of the reasons Canadian has been lagging the other whiskies in growth may be its modesty, suggests Richard McLeod, Brand Director, North American Whisky for Pernod Ricard. “I think that we have to start beating our chest a little more about our quality, what makes us different, and how we stack up against the rest of the world,” he says. “Globally speaking, over the last 10 to 15 years we have seen [most] of the major whisky producing regions in the world stand up and actively support their whisky export business. It is time for Canada to get involved and show the world that we really do make an incredible liquid as good as any being made by our colleagues in those countries. We have as much flexibility in the maturation and blending process as anyone, which gives us greater freedom to express different taste profiles for the consumer to enjoy.”

Small Town Grocer, Big Time Innovator

Andy Havens, the manager of Scott's Foods in Norwalk, has watched the evolution of grocery stores entering the liquor business. In 1987, when retail sales shifted from state-owned to privately-owned stores, he remembers calling or faxing orders to the Iowa Alcoholic Beverages Division (ABD) warehouse and, over the years, some of the challenges that would occur.

"Faxes could be blurry and sometimes hard to read," he said. "Or maybe someone on either end of the phone wrote something down incorrectly." Often, these forms of miscommunication would result in erroneous orders and additional time and work for both ABD and the customer.

Those challenges have disappeared now that Andy is using ABD's customer web portal. As an early adopter, he's already placed nearly twenty orders online and is very impressed with the ease and accuracy of the process. "If a product is out of stock, I know right away," he said. "And I like how I can start to fill the cart, take a break to deal with a customer question, and come back to ordering without a hitch." Because Andy tends to place his orders at the same time every week – whether a result of him being a creature of habit or simply because it's the ideal time in the busy schedule of a full-service local grocery store – he has yet to take advantage of another feature of the portal: the ability to order at any time of the day or night. The portal is never 'closed' which is sure to be a long-lasting feature for many customers. Other than not capitalizing on that specific feature, though, Andy notes that, when the opportunity to use the ordering portal arose, he was quick to sign up and it now appears that many of his fellow licensees are following suit.

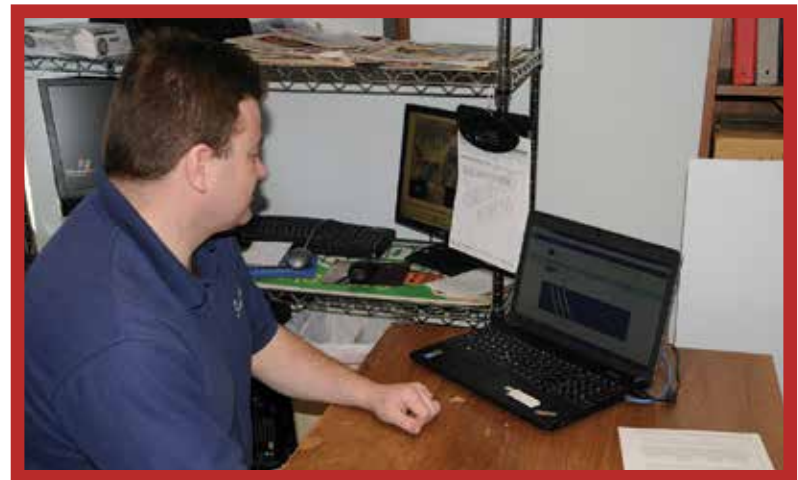

Currently, more than 300 class LE licensees are using either the web portal or EDI, an electronic inventory replacement system preferred by larger retailers such as Hy-Vee and WalMart. Both systems provide greater ease and flexibility in ordering as well as saving time for the retailer. But only the web portal provides the more authentic on-line shopping experience with features such as images of specific product listings – so that you can see what you're buying – and categorizing products into subsets such as Iowa-based distilleries and specific types of liquor like vodka or bourbon.

ABD is planning for a steady shift to the online ordering process. Beginning June 1, 2015, any new LE licensee will be required to order online and, after

General Manager Andy Havens takes inventory of what he needs to order before placing his alcohol order online.

September 1, 2015, whenever a license comes up for annual renewal, the owner of that license will make the transition to online ordering. This means that, by late summer of 2016, all liquor orders from ABD will be placed electronically.

ABD has made the commitment to provide the training and support needed to assist licensees in making this transition with user guides, webinars and in-person training, where staff will travel to specific stores in order to provide assistance.

Training guides are also available at the ABD website at <http://iowaabd.com> so customers can refresh their memories whenever they need.

And, according to Andy Havens, those training sessions shouldn't take too long.

"I've ordered online about seventeen times, now," said Andy Havens. "It's quick, error free and intuitive. I honestly can't imagine doing it any other way."

A PLACE IN THE CROWD

Gin producers have been expanding the variety of their offerings to entice consumers into giving this flavorful spirit a well-earned spot at the table.

BY ROBERT PLOTKIN

Note: This excerpt is printed with permission from the July/August 2014 issue of StateWays—the Beverage Alcohol Merchandising Magazine for Control States.

Americans are rediscovering the affordable elegance and unrivaled complexity of premium gin. Crafted according to a secret blend of aromatics, every brand is endowed with an engaging personality as individually distinctive as DNA, which explains why no two smell or taste the same. So when gin fanciers say they fancy a particular gin more than the others, believe them.

“Gin is definitely undergoing a reappraisal by trade and consumers,” explains Bob Fowkes, director and cofounder of Brockmans Gin. “First, the craft brewing movement is heightening everyone’s interest in the subject of taste. Gin delivers more favorably in that respect versus say neutral vodka. In addition, the process and recipe story for gin has a greater degree of interest and fascination for consumers. Gin tends to be unique and different and probably resistant to being flavored with cake, bubblegum, and bacon.”

The character differences between the brands lie in how they’re made. The most widely produced type is London Dry Gin, a term that now refers to a style rather than a geographical reference. They’re produced in two stages. First, a fermented mash of cereal grains is distilled in specially designed gin stills. The highly rectified, neutral spirit is then redistilled with the introduction of botanicals.

The exact composition of these aromatic ingredients is a guarded trade secret and essentially distinguishes one premium brand from another. An exceptional gin makes its presence immediately known with an outpouring of fresh, celery-crisp aromas elicited from botanicals such as juniper berries, citrus peels, herbs, roots, and spices.

These are indeed heady days for gin. “We think that boutique spirits are the really hot spirit category,” says August Sebastiani, president of The Other Guys Wine, makers of Uncle Val’s Gin.

The resurgent popularity of the cocktail has prompted the release of many new artisanal brands. “People don’t buy categories, they buy brands,” asserts Thomas Mooney, co-owner and CEO of House Spirits Distillery. “The rise of gin is led by a handful of pioneering brands that have introduced new, more balanced expressions of gin. These growth brands are more mixable, but they also pair well with complex fruit and spice flavors that are not as kind to more traditional gins.”
