WHAT OTHERS HAVE SAID ABOUT BOOKS

Dear little child, this little book
Is less a primer than a key
To sunder gates where wonder waits
Your "Open Sesame!"

—RUPERT HUGHES.

Books are the best things, well used; abused, among the worst.

—EMERSON.

The love of books is a love which requires neither justification, apology nor defense.

—LANGFORD.

A man will turn over half a library to make one book.

—SAMUEL JOHNSON.

It is chiefly through books that we enjoy intercourse with superior minds, and these invaluable means of communication are in the reach of all. In the best books great men talk to us, give us their most precious thoughts, and pour their souls into ours.

—CHANNING.

A wise man will select his books, for he would not wish to class them all under the sacred name of friends. Some can be accepted only as acquaintances. The best books of all kinds are taken to the heart, and cherished as his most precious possessions. Others to be chatted with for a time, to spend a few pleasant hours with and laid aside, but not forgotten.

—LANGFORD.

All that mankind has done, thought, gained or been is lying in magic preservation in the pages of books. They are the chosen possession of men.

—CARLYLE.

The true university of these days is a collection of books.

—CARLYLE.

Books should to one of these four ends conduce,
For wisdom, piety, delight, or use.

—SIR JOHN DENHAM.

The extent to which a library is well used is a significant test of our whole educational activity in the school.

—MCMURRY.

Iowa Law Providing for the Purchase of Library Books for the Schools of the State.

4322. Library fund. The auditor of each county in this state shall withhold annually from the money received from the apportionment for the several school districts, fifteen cents for each person of school age residing in each school corporation, as shown by the annual report of the secretary, for the purchase of books, as hereinafter provided.

4323. Purchase of books—distribution. Between the first Monday of July and the first day of October in each year, the county board of education shall expend all money withheld by the auditor, as provided in the preceding section, in the purchase of books for the use of the school district, and shall distribute the books thus selected to the librarians among the several school districts in the proportion that the number of persons of school age living in the school district bears to the number of such persons living in the county.

4324. List of books. The state board of educational examiners shall prepare annually lists of books suitable for use in school district libraries, and furnish copies of such lists to each county superintendent and to each member of each county board of education.

4325. Record of books. It shall be the duty of each secretary to keep in a record book, furnished by the board of directors, a complete record of the books purchased and distributed by him.

4326. Librarian. Unless the board of directors shall elect some other person, the secretary in independent districts and director in subdistricts in school townships shall act as librarian and shall receive and have the care and custody of the books, and shall loan them to teachers, pupils, and other residents of the district, in accordance with the rules and regulations prescribed by the state board of educational examiners and board of directors. Each librarian shall keep a complete record book furnished by the board of directors.

4327. Custody of Library. During the periods that the school is in session the library shall be placed in the school house, and the teacher shall be responsible to the district for its proper care and protection.

4328. Board to supervise. The board of directors shall have supervision of all books, and shall make an equitable distribution thereof among the schools of the corporation.

INTRODUCTORY NOTES

To County Boards of Education:

This manual has been prepared for the Board of Educational Examiners in accordance with the provisions of the library law enacted by the Forty-Second General Assembly of the State of Iowa. Its purpose is to aid the county boards of education in the selection of books for school libraries.

Because of the immediate need of a tentative list, this compilation may be considered as "a report of progress" rather than a finished product. The limited amount of time and research facilities has made it necessary to publish the first edition without annotations for each title. Series of classics, basal readers, lists of magazines and periodicals, and bulletins of federal government and other sources are also omitted in this edition with the suggestion that schools make their own selections of these items as best suit their needs.

The titles have been classified according to the Dewey Decimal System as used by public librarians. It is recommended that the distribution of the appropriation among the ten classes of the Dewey Decimal System be made for the high school approximately as follows:

0-300—Reference and general work.....	15%
300-800—Sciences, useful arts, fine arts....	25%
800-900—Literature .....	35%
300-400 } —Sociology and history.....	25%
900-1000 }

The operation of the library law should not diminish co-operation with public libraries. The resources of the public libraries as well as the assistance of the librarian are important even though the school is increasing its own book laboratory. The advice of a well trained librarian should be secured when the purchase of subscription books is under consideration.

CRITERIA OF SELECTION

The findings of scientific research were taken into consideration by the committee in the technique of compiling the list. The criteria for the selection of titles included two basic principles: children's reading preferences as revealed by important investigations; and the use of standardized lists. These were supplemented by choices of teachers and committee recommendations of recent publications. A questionnaire was sent to representative superintendents, principals, teachers, school librarians, and college faculties of the state requesting their recommendations. Many of these replies have been received too late for use in this edition; frequently their choices coincided with selections made from the above lists.

The annotated bibliography of research studies in Children's Reading Interests used as a background for the compilation follows, as well as the additional references that were used in the compilation of the list.

ORDERING BOOKS

In selecting the books for the schools of the county, the county board of education is challenged with a new responsibility of tremendous importance. The proper increase of library facilities should enrich the curriculum and supply vicarious experience for the children. The time and effort spent in selecting books best suited to the needs of the schools will be rewarded by far reaching service in the development of the modern reading program.

The reading activities of today include three important objectives: The enjoyment of enriched experience; the development of crucial reading attitudes, abilities, skills and habits; the encouragement of strong motives for reading. The attainment of these objectives is dependent upon the teacher, but is greatly facilitated by the careful selection of material according to work and recreational types. The one is utilitarian in purpose, the other belongs to the enjoyment of leisure time. Definite help in selecting books in accordance with these principles is found in Chapter VII of the Twenty-Fourth Year Book, Report of the National Committee on Reading; The Winnetka Graded Book List by Washburn & Vogel; The Primary School by Annie Moore; and Children's Reading by Terman & Lima. It would be helpful for the county boards to have these references on hand in elaborating on this compilation.

In selecting books for country school libraries, valuable advice may be secured from your county superintendent whose supervisory duties bring him into direct contact with their library needs. In ordering books for the city, consolidated and town districts of the county, the superintendents in charge are in a position to offer recommendations as to the particular library needs of these schools.

Careful attention to the needs of each district is important in the distribution of the books in the county. The census enumeration in each district is the basis. Proper allotments to each grade represented in accordance with library needs is essential. As the individual enumerated in the census is made the basis for withholding and expending the money it follows that in the purchase of books, the individual child should be made the governing unit also; and the money expended and the books selected so that every child enrolled is benefited. In no instance should all the funds available be spent for the benefit of one department only, but purchases made that will give each grade its proportional share of the money. In the cities having several buildings the moneys should be expended so that the children in each of the separate buildings will receive the benefit proportionally. In township districts the books should be purchased and distributed among the schools in proportion to the number of children attending each school. Teachers and local school boards may be called upon to help in the adjustment of these details.

USE AND CARE OF BOOKS

It is urgently recommended that definite instruction be given from the kindergarten through the high school in the proper use of books and libraries. To select good books is not enough; children should be taught to respect and care for their books. Since proficiency in study habits is strategic to the whole program of learning, teachers are expected to take time to train their pupils in the skills and abilities needed for the effective use of books and other sources of information. A list of references arranged in order of importance is included with the hope that teachers will find it helpful in developing ability on the part of students to use books intelligently. Testing of results in each school system is obviously necessary in order to show how much improvement is really being made in the attainment of these skills.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

We are deeply indebted to the committee consisting of T. W. Kerfoot, principal of the high school, Fort Madison; Miss Grace Shields, supervisor of primary instruction, Cedar Rapids, and Mrs. Lena B. Hecker, former normal training critic, Greene, for the major part of the work in connection with the compilation of this library list. Special mention is made of the generous service contributed in many capacities by Miss Julia A. Robinson, executive secretary and director of library extension of the State Library Commission. Acknowledgment is also due Miss Vera M. Dixon, librarian of the Des Moines public schools for advice in the organization of the material, and to Miss Mabel Snedaker, extension supervisor State University of Iowa, for bibliography on poetry, the use of books and libraries, and books on how to study. Sincere appreciation is expressed to the many others who contributed to the development of the work by responding to requests for their choices in minimum book lists for elementary, junior and senior high school grades, or for organizing minimum lists in certain subjects, as French, agriculture, home economics, manual arts, social studies, and others.

The thought dominating the service of everyone connected with this work has been to help create enriched reading activities for the school children of our great state. Respectfully yours,

AGNES SAMUELSON,
Chairman Board of Educational Examiners.

BOOKS AS TOOLS

---

A MOST important function of the school library is to teach the use of books as tools. A university president has said, "Instruction and guidance in the use of the library would be about as important a course of instruction as the American student could possibly have given him." The knowledge of how to find material on a special topic by using the card catalog and the indexes to the magazines and of how to make an accurate and usable bibliography or list of references will save much time for college students, and will help to make the pupils who never go to college intelligent users of books and of the public library.

—ANNE T. EATON,

Librarian of Lincoln School of Teachers' College, Columbia University.

ANNOTATED BIBLIOGRAPHY OF STUDIES IN CHILDREN'S READING INTERESTS

1. Thurber, Samuel, "Voluntary Reading in the Classical High School," School Review, Vol. XIII, pp 168-178.

This investigation was carried on in 1896 in the Newton, Mass., High School by means of a questionnaire. The conclusion was that the reading of high school students was of poor quality, since only 2% of the total reading was real literature. Poetry was 1%. He voiced his uncertainty that the best men to prepare lists of books to study in the secondary schools were "learned professors and long experienced teachers."

2. Henderson, H. G., Report on Children's Reading, Report of the Department of Public Instruction, N. Y.

This study was made in 1897 among 3,000 Chicago school children between ages of 9-15 years. He tried to find out what materials the children liked best, what they read, how much they read, why they liked or disliked what they read. Fiction ranked the highest, with boys placing history, adventure, biography, travel, poetry, and science in next ranking. The girls preferred biography over adventure and poetry over travel. Lists of books receiving highest preferences for the different ages were deduced from the data.

3. Kilpatrick, E. A., Children's Reading, Northwestern Monthly, Vol. IX, pp 228-233.

In 1898 by the questionnaire method in 150 schools of Massachusetts in the grades 4-9 inclusive, he sought to determine the kind and amount of the reading done by the children; when the interest was greatest, the question also whether or not there was any sex differences in the likes and dislikes. He found that the poetry curves of the boys and girls ranked parallel throughout the grades. Poems, scientific and political activities rarely were mentioned. Girls read poetry and stories, while boys wanted travel and history.

4. Lancaster, E. G., Psychology and Pedagogy of Adolescence, Ped. Sem., Vol. 5, pp. 61-128.

Questionnaire method secured 523 answers from people in 20 states indicated that "the poems studied as tasks in school faded."

5. Wissler, Clark, Interest of Children in Reading in Elementary Schools, Ped. Sem. Vol. 5 pp. 523-540.

This study was made in Indiana where a state series of readers was used. The children were asked to write down the subjects of lessons remembered from previous ones, to list the ones liked best and state the reasons. This was in 1898. The 1,950 replies showed that "mere instructional lesson, the moral and its setting, the abstract poems on duty, happiness, love and nature made up the bulk of the ones remembered up to 5% only." "The curve of the sexes was remarkable in agreement."

6. Vostrovsky, Clara, A Study of Children's Reading Tastes, Ped. Sem., Vol. VI, pp. 523-538.

She used the questionnaire method in 1899 to study the reading tastes of children in the Stockton, California, Schools through the library withdrawals. The general reading tastes of children, the number and types of books read, the reasons for liking or disliking books were sought. She found that children of 9-10 years like the juvenile stories best; that 50% of the boys and 48% of the girls used the public library. The children gave four reasons for their choices of books: (1) because of the children; (2) because of the adventure; (3) because of the funny things; (4) because of miscellaneous reasons.

7. Abbott, Reading of High School Pupils, School Review, Vol. X, pp. 585-600.

He gave a list of books totaling 178 from the Harvard pamphlets and the N. E. A. Report to 2,499 High School students 14-19 years of age, and asked them to check to a given plan. This was in 1902. He concluded that boys and girls are not men and women, had tastes of their own unlike their teachers; that they were going through "progressive development which must not be forced and they dislike literature inconsistent with that development." Adventure for boys and sentiment for girls are reported.

8. Low, Florence B., Reading of the Modern Girl, Nineteenth Century, Vol. LIX, pp. 279-287.

In 1906 she used the questionnaire method to study in England the reading choices of the modern girl. She found very narrow choices in the field of poetry.

9. Smith, F. D. Pupils' Voluntary Reading, Ped. Sem., Vol. XIV, pp. 208-222.

In 1907 Smith sought to study this matter with 915 boys and 1,284 girls in Iowa City and Council Bluffs Schools. He concluded that there may be individual differences in the matter of literary tastes and choice of books that appeal to children in so far as they are translated into actual life.

10. Atkinson, F. W., The Reading of Young People, Library Journal, 1908, pp. 129-131.

This was a study of the vacation reading in 1912 of high school pupils of Springfield, Mass. He found that the Freshmen read more than the Seniors, at least in poetry.

11. Anderson, Mrs. Roxanna, Preliminary Study of Reading Tastes of High School Pupils, Ped. Sem., Vol. 19, pp. 38-60.

She used the questionnaire to secure the data in 1912. It was answered by 269 boys and 309 girls of Iowa City and Fort Dodge High Schools. No poetry is mentioned in the list of the best liked books. She concluded that the "tastes of boys and girls should be respected in part in forming courses of study. We must begin at least with what is naturally interesting to pupils and lead them to high grade literature so gradually that they will always be interested." The teacher needs to know the psychology of children's tastes in order to direct his studies.

12. Jones, C. E., Sources of Interest in High School English.

This was an investigation made in 1912 in 7 different cities of New York state, where a uniform syllabus is used, 4,210 cases being totalled. He found that the selections made by the teachers and the pupils were not highly dissimilar. The poetry was mentioned more frequently by the girls, the story being the element of interest.

13. Yoakum, G. A., Course of Study in English Literature for Elementary Schools, S. U. I., Thesis, 1919.

He studied 28 courses of study and thus secured a composite course of study in prose and poetry by tabulating selections as to frequency. He found 370 of 1,152 poems that were listed three or more times. This composite list showed agreement with the materials to be used in the literature for the elementary school as well as with six sets of school readers.

14. Eastman, Max, The Enjoyment of Poetry, Scribners, New York, 1919.

In his book he states that children are poetic people because they are not practical. They are found to be often intolerant of poetry in the books because they have it in reality.

15. Alcott, Frances Jenkins, The Children's Reading, Houghton Mifflin Co., New York City, 1912.

16. Wilkinson, Marguerite, New Voices, Macmillan Co., 1919.

"We are often told that children do not like poetry. The truth of the matter probably is that they do not like what is frequently offered them in the name of poetry, or that they do not like the way that it is offered. Their taste is sometimes better than ours, for it is the result of natural and sincere relations and not of prejudice, and unfettered training." She opposed rhymed ethics for children.

17. Holic, J. F., A Course of Study in English Literature for the Elementary School, 1919 Thesis.

He classified helps found in 4 sets of readers and compared these with stenographic reports of actual recitations where poems were the material in order to determine their relation to method. "Imaginative realization" is the first essential to enjoyment and understanding of a selection.

18. Uhl, W. L., Scientific Determination of the Elementary School Course of Study in Reading, University of Wisconsin, Thesis Study, 1921.

Two thousand two hundred and fifty-three teachers in 80 cities and 25 states were asked to judge 50 selections for each of the 8 grades. He sought to eliminate the unsuitable material and find and place superior material. The pupils gave the teachers these reasons for disliking a selection: "too mature, contained hard words, unfamiliar subject matter, abstract and hard symbolism, no story, unreal, too long, scrappy, too sad, childish, tired of it, monotonous, not well told." Reasons for liking a selection were: "interesting, action and character, adventure, kindness, humor, easy content, easy diction, portrayal of supernatural, faithfulness, loyalty." He concluded that the difficulty with poetry is "always with certain poems and not with poetry in general." To be a superior selection it must have several appeals, appeal to several grades, the moral not obtrusive, and that literary merit must be evident. In ranking a selection he placed it where the children and teachers ranked it highest.

19. Dunn, Fannie W., Interest Factors in Primary Reading Material, T. C. Contribution to Education, New York, 1921.

She classified material in 29 primary readers. Out of 1,043 selections 321 were miscellaneous poems, 230 folk and fairy, 121 miscellaneous, 119 Mother Goose. She found that "the content of primary reading books indicates an absence of a general agreement as to what specific selections should be included." Her general conclusion was that the "content of school readers should, in fine, be in the earlier years as broad as young life itself." She also stated that "if the tastes of childhood are ignored or violated, either the habit of neglect or of actual distaste for this form of literature (poetry) will be the outcome."

20. Jordan, A. M., Children's Interests in Reading, Teachers' College Contribution, 1921.

He studied children's interests by four methods: (1) a questionnaire to children, (2) questionnaire to adults concerning their early reading, (3) observation and experiment, (4) library withdrawals. He reports the major interests of boys from 10-13 to be fiction of war, adventure, sports, Boy Scouts, while that of girls of 10-13 is the fiction of home, school, fairy stories, love and stories of historical background. Jordan also reported the J. C. Show investigation in West Virginia where 900 school children of Wooster, Mass., were studied and from their reports a reading list of books consisting of the 56 most popular ones were secured.

21. Bamesberger, Velda C., Standard Requirement for Memorizing Literary Material, University of Illinois Bulletin, Vol. XVII, No. 26.

She selected 50 courses of study. Tabulation of frequencies—gave her 329 poems listed five times or over.

22. King, Cora E., Favorite Poems for Children, Teachers' College Record, May, 1922.

Four thousand eight hundred children in 10 cities in grades 1-8 inclusive were asked to write down titles to selections of poetry they liked best, having been warned previously to be thinking about this. Lists were then made of the selection mentioned 10 times or over. This list more nearly possesses qualities that appeal to children than such lists as the Yoakam list, for example.

23. Franzen and Knight, Textbook Selection, Warwick and York, 1922.

An investigation in Iowa High Schools in literary courses which were liked or disliked. They concluded that objective evidence of actual experimental tests be used in determining course of study in literature rather than the subjective opinion even of experts.

24. Mackintosh, Helen, Children's Choices in Poetry, S. U. I., Thesis, 1924.

She presented 100 poems selected with essential characteristics of rhythm, rhyme, and story uppermost in mind, since these were mentioned most frequently by experts. These were exposed to several fifth grades in such a way that all children heard the same poems and were allowed to give their preferences. The results were treated statistically in such a way as to give a list of 50 best poems qualitatively ranked. Emphasis should be placed on the fact that in particularly every case modern poems not in the course of study were chosen in preference to those already in the course of study. The conclusions with specific reference to the fifth grade were:

- (1) Every grade should have a minimum list of 50-100 poems.
- (2) Much more modern poetry should be introduced into the course of study. The criterion for selection should be in a reputable anthology.
- (3) Children most often choose poems because they possess humor and dialect. Poems with these qualities should be well represented.
- (4) The "good" poem is one which possesses a number of interest qualities preferably including humor, story, dialect, adventure, excitement, romance, rhythm and rhyme. It should be concrete rather than thoughtful or meditative.
- (5) Children's choices, within the range of literary merit, should be taken into account in building the course of study.

25. Garnette, Wilma, Children's Choices in Prose, S. U. I., Thesis, 1924.

The purpose was to make selections of preferred stories and to discover the elements in them that gave them their places. A tentative list of 80 stories was made up rather arbitrarily by aid of experts in English and Education, guided by the criterion of literary merit and interest. Courses of Study of chief cities of the United States in grades 3, 4 and 5 which had stories common to all were listed. Graded lists from libraries, late reading series were taken into consideration. A list of twenty preferred stories were deducted on the basis of the returns. The general conclusion was that the course of study in literature for all grades should be based on two factors, literary merit and scientific evidence of children's interests through the determination of their preferences. Further experimentation needed to determine what stories to include. A wealth of usable material is neglected. The principles are: (1) Material of literature should be of literary merit to be determined by experts, (2) material of interest to be determined by children and by adults who have profited by experimentation in carefully and scientifically determining children's tastes.

26. Uhl, W. L. The Materials of Reading, Chapter VI, Children's Interests, Rand McNally, 1924.

Emphasis is placed on the importance of consulting children in the selection and organization of courses in reading, and in literature. The content and conduct of high school literature should not be remote from the pupil interests. In making up a book list this study would afford a good background. The course of study maker today needs to have the benefit of such scientific investigation in the field of materials in reading.

27. Winnetka Graded Book List, Carleton Washburne and Mabel Vogel, American Library Association, 1926.

The Winnetka Graded Book List is the result of a statistical investigation as to books enjoyed by children of various ages and measured degrees of reading ability. It was carried on by Washburne and Vogel with the co-operation of the American Library Association and the assistance of 800 teachers and 36,750 children in 43 cities. The books were graded according to the median reading grade of the children who read and liked the books. The data had been gathered by a determining ballot for children to indicate their choices and the Stanford Silent Reading Tests. In seeking to determine the books being read by the children and enjoyed by them, the ages and reading ability of the children necessary for the enjoyment of the books, the factors of age, reading ability, children's interests, literary merit as agreed by experts in children's libraries were considered. It is interesting to note in this connection that the opinion of the adult and the choice of the children does not always coincide. This is also the finding in the Mackintosh and Garnette studies.

It is hoped that this study will make possible more intelligent selection of books for children and serve as a basis for future objective studies as to factors which make books interesting and suitable for children of various ages of reading ability.

28. Morgan, Jay Elener, Our Literary Heritage, 4th Year Book, Department of Superintendence, N. E. A., Chapter X, p. 289.

Three hundred and seventy-two ballots were secured by the Journal of the National Educational Association consisting of the judgments of teachers and votes of pupils on books for the first 8 grades. This is not a final list, but is important in that the procedure was teacher and pupil participation. The original list on which the balloting occurred was made up from an analysis of 50 representative courses of studies of various sized cities by Velda C. Bamesberger in 1920.

"Growing feeling among experts who are studying children's tastes and their learning ability that children's preference should be given large weight in the selection of items to be included in memory lists."

29. Huber, Miriam Blanton, Experiment in Poetry, Teachers' College Record, October 1926, p. 93.

This is an investigation in accordance with the pleas on the part of the educators for the place of interest in the educational scheme. Judgments of over 50,000 children in all sections of the United States were secured with the help of 1,500 teachers to determine the poetry most suitable for use in the grades I-IX inclusive. The first thing was to determine the poetry now considered as most appropriate for use in the elementary and junior high school. Two methods were used: (1) the subjective opinion of expert teachers of poetry, (2) the examination of 900 courses of study and practically all of the most used text books with minute analysis of 30 courses of study in each grade I-IX. One hundred poems were placed in the experimental edition; the pupils had twelve reactions recorded. The data were treated statistically so that each poem received a score comparable to the score received by every other poem. The order in which poems in each grade were liked was determined and the order in which each poem was liked best.

A list of 38 rejected poems is given, also the ones receiving the highest rankings. Ballads are popular, while on the whole, the majority of poems preferred in each grade contain action, plot and humor.

"If composite of children's interests, as shown in the study is valid, it appears that errors in judgment are as numerous in the opinion of experts in the field of children's reading as in the present position indicated by the course of study or text books. It becomes, then, increasingly clear that if we hope to lead the children into the insight of literature and appreciation of it, it must be through materials selected on the basis of and suited to their tastes."

30. The Poetry Book, Miriam Blanton Huber, Herbert B. Bruner, Charles Madison Curry, Rand McNally Company, 1926, Vol. I-IX.

This publication has material arranged for each grade of the elementary and junior high schools which embody the results of the above experimentation and additional material added for school use. Vol. X of the series entitled "Children's Interest in Poetry" gives the procedure of experimentation and results in detail.

31. Terman, Lewis, and Lima, Margaret, Children's Reading, D. Appleton Company, 1926.

This book is based on an experimental study of the qualitative and quantitative aspects of children's reading, with special reference to individual differences caused by age, sex, intelligence and special interests. Approximately two thousand children were studied. Data were obtained from three sources, namely, the home, the school, and the children themselves.

The results from all these sources were statistically treated, and largely on the basis of the findings, which are reviewed in Part I of this book, an extensive list of books suitable for children was drawn up. This list, classified according to types, is given in Part II.
