REPORT OF THE BOARD OF PAROLE

This report of the Board of Parole covers the biennial period ending June 30, 1920. Presented with it are compilations of statistics covering the same period, and also since the organization of the board, together with county reports of criminal statistics required to be made by clerks of the district court, under section 293 of the code supplement with amendments thereto.

PAROLES GRANTED

During the period covered by this report 596 paroles have been granted, this total including men paroled from the two institutions, Fort Madison and Anamosa, and those paroled by order of the board before commitment and upon the recommendation of the trial judge and county attorney. Of the total number thus paroled, 258 were actively reporting at the end of the period, and 181 had been discharged from parole. Of the remainder, 103 had absconded and not been apprehended, parole had been revoked in 48 instances and the violators returned to prison, 5 had died, and the sentence of one was commuted by the governor upon the recommendation of the board. In general, the results of the work have not varied materially from previous periods. There has been a good percentage of success, measured by the number who have met the conditions of parole. There have been failures, as there always will be; for no matter how much aid and encouragement may be given to them, there are men of criminal purposes and hereditary moral weakness who cannot, or do not, respond to efforts for their betterment. But taken in full, what has been done fully justifies the expenditure and efforts which the state is making along the lines of aiding the willful and unfortunate.

CASES REFERRED BY THE GOVERNOR

During the biennial period there was referred to this board by the governor, under the provision of code supplement section 5626, twenty-eight applications for pardon or commutation of sentence. Of this number twenty-six were under life sentence, and two were servicing sentences less than life, these latter being referred under the amendment to section 5626 made by chapter 173 acts of the 38th General Assembly. Of the whole number thus referred, recommendations for commutation of life sentences to a definite term of years were made in twenty-one cases, and recommendations against clemency were made in seven cases. With one exception, all of the recommendations were approved. Of the total number of referred cases twelve were for murder. Recommendations against clemency were made in five cases, and in seven it was advised that there be commutation of sentence, with one exception the terms recommended ranging 30 to 65 years. Ten of the applications which were referred were in rape cases. In two instances recommendation was made against pardon or commutation, and eight were recommended for clemency. These latter cases were of the class commonly termed "statutory rape," where the act had been mutual with a girl below the age of consent, not having the element of force. Others were of robbery, larceny, and placing obstructions on a railroad track. In several of the cases where commutation of sentence was made, paroles were subsequently granted, and with good results.

SEGREGATION OF FIRST AND OLD OFFENDERS

We call attention to a condition which in our judgment seriously impairs the results of the work of a reformatory nature which the General Assembly had in mind at the time of the act fixing the indeterminate sentence and establishing the board of parole.

Section 192 of the acts of the 32nd General Assembly, being 5718-a5 of code supplement of 1913, provides that persons between the ages of sixteen and thirty years convicted of crimes, excepting murder, treason, sodomy and incest, who had not previously been convicted of felony, shall be committed to the reformatory at Anamosa; all others, which includes men of maturity and former offenders, shall be committed to the penitentiary. Section 5718-a8 of the same act provides that if it shall appear at any time after conviction and incarceration in the reformatory that a prisoner was over the age of thirty years at the time of commitment, or that he had been before convicted of a felony, "he shall at once be transferred to the prison at Fort Madison."

Prior to the passage of this act both of the institutions were penitentiaries, and commitments to them were from designated counties in the state without regard to the crime, age, or other conditions. As a result of this method, boys and young men committed for their first offense were as a necessary result of their commitment brought into direct association with older men of criminal instincts and subjected to influences most damaging to those who might with proper guidance and influences be turned away from crime. These legislative provisions were in direct line with the reformatory idea, and intended to arrest the criminal tendencies of young men and boys not so far gone in crime as to be beyond reasonable hope of reformation. It was recognized in the act that trial courts would at times be misled as to the age or previous record of the man, and to meet such conditions it is required that after commitment, when it shall appear that the age or record of the man is such that original commitment should have been made to Fort Madison, he shall at once be transferred to the proper institution. Trial courts have generally observed the provision of the act as to commitments, yet there have been many instances where men have been committed, with previous criminal records known to the committing authorities.

In the last biennial report of the warden of the reformatory the following statement appears: "Conditions still exist which prevent our having reached the modern conception of a reformatory, the chief of which is the presence in the institution of the following: 56 who have served terms in prisons and penitentiaries, 22 received who were over thirty years of age," etc.

Conditions such as are above noted are practically continuous at the reformatory at Anamosa, varying somewhat in numbers, but never without the presence in that institution of a large number who under the law and in the interests of the plan of reformation of those who are more plastic, should be at Fort Madison.

The administration of this law is not with the board of parole, but we have felt it vital to the work committed to us that such action be taken as will substantially meet the purposes of the law. We are advised and have reason to believe that facilities at Fort Madison are not sufficient to properly house all who shall under the law be in that institution. Whatever steps may be needed along these lines should be taken, that the segregation of the old offenders from the youthful and primary prisoners may be complete.

PROSECUTIONS FOR PAROLE VIOLATION BY ABSCONDING

Section 4897-a code supplement, as amended by chapter 83, acts of the 38th General Assembly, fixed an additional penalty of five years as punishment for parole violators who abscond or escape. During the past biennium a number have violated paroles in that manner. It has been deemed advisable not only as a punishment, but also as a deterrent, to institute prosecutions under that statute, and three cases where the violations were gross were made the basis of indictments in the district court of Jones county, Iowa. In one of the cases plea of guilty was entered. In the others contest is being made, upon the grounds that the statute does not contemplate punishment for escape unless there is an actual leaving of custody and physical control. We make no suggestion of amendment to the statute.

AID OF PAROLED MEN

It is not infrequent that men who are released on parole without means other than the small amount which the statute authorizes to be given to prisoners upon leaving the institution, and without a change of clothing. In a number of cases actual need on the part of the parolee has arisen, either of clothing suitable to his work, or of needed funds to provide for board until the first pay day, or in emergency caused by illness. There is no provision by the state by which such reasonable and necessary wants can be met, and members of the board, the secretary and its agents have at times personally advanced funds to tide over the crises. The obligations thus created have generally been scrupulously met by repayment.

There should be provided by the state for the purpose of meeting such exigencies, a revolving fund of $1,000.00, subject to the order of the board of parole, account of same to be kept by the treasurer of state, with provision that as repayments are made by the parolees they shall be deposited in the fund. We recommend such an appropriation.

LAWS FIXING MINIMUM SENTENCES

The adoption of the indeterminate sentence law in 1907 necessarily contemplated that no minimum sentence should be fixed in passing sentence. The law in terms so provides. The larger part of our criminal statutes were enacted before the passage of the law under which we are now operating, and a number of those yet provide both maximum and minimum penalties. In our last report we recommended revision to the extent that the provision as to minimum penalties be repealed, but no legislative action was taken. As the coming General Assembly will necessarily go largely into the subject of a general code revision, we consider it opportune to renew our recommendation that the inconsistencies in our laws to which we have referred be given attention and corrected.

PAROLES BEFORE COMMITMENT

Section 5447-a code supplement 1913, provides for parole from the bench, by the trial judge, in such cases as to him may be proper, placing "such persons in custody, and under the care and guardianship of any suitable person, a resident and citizen of the state of Iowa." In many instances trial judges in exercising this power have requested this board to assume such supervision, and such has been done. There is, however, question whether the language of the statute authorizing supervision by "a suitable person, a resident and citizen of the state of Iowa," in terms authorizes this board to act in that relation. There are, as we believe, direct advantages resulting to one on parole from the supervision and control which the board of parole can and does give, because of the organization, the means of employment, and the methods and system of observation employed; and we recommend such amendment of the statute as will without question permit such authority and responsibility to be assumed by this board when so requested by the trial court, with the power of control, discharge, and punishment for violation of parole, as is now held by the board in all cases paroled by it.

COMPENSATION

In our last preceding report it was recommended that the compensation of the members of the board be at a fixed salary, and not by a per diem as at present. In the readjustment of salaries and compensation of state officers made by the last General Assembly no change was made as to this department in that particular. The requirements of the office are such that full time service is substantially demanded of all connected with this work, and in our judgment compensation should be fixed on that basis.

SOME RESULTS

As is often the case with all departments organized for public service, there is occasional criticism of the work of the board of parole. This is largely due to the fact that in many instances the failures of men on parole who commit new crimes are made of public interest by reason of newspaper and official accounts, and such are erroneously taken as representative of all those whom the board has trusted in paroling them. The men who meet parole requirements are as a rule only locally known, and generally there is no public commendation of those who have made good. Such would not be desired by the men themselves. They much prefer that their part in wrong doing be forgotten and that they be permitted to work along the new lines of cleaner, better living, where they are led by their own resolutions, and the assistance of the board of parole, and of considerate employers. Good results in such cases are not generally known. But of the failures the public learns, and by them too often is the success of the work measured.

Our files are filled with life stories which mean much. They tell of large numbers who have fallen, who have been degraded and punished, who have under modern methods of treating criminals been encouraged and aided by the board of parole and like helpful agencies, and whose lives since those dreadful days of distrust and imprisonment, have been filled with hope, ambition and success. Below we give brief accounts of a number of cases covering a period of years, which, however, are but a few of the many hundreds who have, as we know, been aided by this work. Proper consideration for these men, and for the women who were until 1917 under the jurisdiction of this board, leads us to omit all statements from which their identity might be traced; but the records which follow are of facts and results which may be illuminating:

1. Uttering forged instrument. Discharged from parole in 1913. Is a cement contractor in an Iowa city and has been doing well for several years.
2. Breaking and entering. 3rd conviction. Discharged from parole in 1919. Has factory work, is married and doing well and appears thrifty.
3. Seduction. Discharged from parole in 1912. Has employment as a card sign painter with a large Iowa concern. Is married and has a family and doing well.
4. Embezzlement. Discharged from parole in 1918. Is sales manager for a large manufacturing establishment and is prospering.

5. Mingling poison with food. Discharged from parole in 1918. Second conviction, first as burglary. Is employed in Iowa. After discharge from parole remained in his former employment and is doing well.
6. Second degree murder. Discharged from parole in 1915. Is now employed by the state in a responsible capacity.
7. Breaking and entering. Discharged from parole in 1916. Formerly in Eldora. Has since his discharge continued in employment in the community where he was placed on parole and has done remarkably well.
8. Burglary. Discharged in 1918. A number of former convictions for burglary. That had been his business. Employed by a large concern in Des Moines and has been advanced in position. Reconciliation effected between the man and his wife who had secured a divorce after his conviction, and they appear to be doing well.
9. Forgery. Discharged from parole in 1918. Prior to conviction had been going over the country generally gambling and issuing forged checks. Is now operating in this city a business of his own and is respected.
10. Robbery with deadly weapons. Discharged from parole in 1918. An electrician, has steady employment and is trusted.
11. Larceny. Discharged from parole in 1911. Home had been in another state prior to conviction. Upon his final discharge returned to his home state and has since led a correct life.
12. Larceny by embezzlement. Discharged from parole in 1919. During the parole period was employed by a large Iowa concern and was fully trusted. Since his discharge he has continued in the same employment and is doing well.
13. Adultery. Discharged from parole in 1917. Not married at the time of the crime. Has since married and is managing a large farm and receiving a fine salary.
14. Rape. Discharged in 1912. Since his discharge from parole has married and has the confidence of his fellow citizens and has served several terms as mayor of an Iowa town.
15. False pretenses. Discharged from parole in 1919. On parole was employed by a large concern in Des Moines. After discharge continued in the same employment and is now highly recommended by his employers.
16. Forgery. Discharged in 1918. Prior life "confidence game." Had been a dipsomaniac. Now teaching mathematics in the schools of a western city.
17. Breaking and entering. Discharged from parole in 1915. Owns a small farm, has a comfortable home, wife and family, and is doing well.
18. Forgery. 5 prior convictions. Discharged from parole in 1919. Had spent more than twenty years in different state prisons. Never before - had parole opportunity. Paroled by this board to a manufacturer in Iowa and met all conditions. Is married. Has been engaged in business for himself and earned confidence. Seems entirely rebuilt.

19. Breaking and entering. Discharged from parole in 1918. Prior to that had been paroled, absconded, violated his parole and returned; was re-paroled and finally discharged. He was a boy with small endowments, no good home influences and needed care. Since his last parole has worked steadily, and after his discharge seems to be going well.
20. Conspiracy. Discharged from parole in 1917. Had been wild in his youth and up to the time of his conviction. After parole he did well and now seems to have settled down and is working steadily.
21. Breaking and entering. Discharged from parole in 1916. A practical printer and worked steadily at his trade after his discharge until the opening of the war, when he entered the army, and later was honorably discharged, and is now at his home in another state.
22. Larceny. Discharged from parole in 1918. Second conviction. Many prior arrests for minor offenses. Now employed in Des Moines by a large corporation and appears in all ways to be doing well.
23. Assault on rape. Member of a bad gang. Discharged in 1918. Since his discharge has been working steadily and observers say he is doing well.
24. Incest. Discharged from parole in 1919 after a service of more than ten years. Employed by a large concern in Iowa. His foreman says he is one of their best men.
25. Breaking and entering. Discharged from parole in 1918. Working steadily in an Iowa city and has done very well since his release.
26. Breaking and entering. 3rd conviction. Discharged from parole in 1918. A weak fellow, but is now doing satisfactorily in state employ.
27. Assault with intent to commit manslaughter. Discharged from parole in 1912. When on parole worked for a printing company in Iowa and after discharge returned to his old home in New York. Is married, has a family, is operating a farm and is respected and prosperous.
28. Breaking and entering. 2nd conviction. Discharged from parole in 1919. Was given to the excessive use of intoxicants. At his former home no employment could be found for him because he had the reputation of a bad citizen. Placed with a manufacturing establishment elsewhere in the state where he has since remained and his employer says he is one of their best men.
29. Uttering forged instrument. Paroled, violated his parole and returned to prison. Re-paroled two years later, committed crime on parole and was again returned. Later was again paroled, met all conditions well, and was discharged from parole in 1919. He is now trusted in his employment, is married and has a good home.
30. Bank robbery. 4th conviction. Discharged from parole in 1918. Was placed on parole in an Iowa town at employment and became a student. Is in the same place and doing well.

31. Breaking and entering. Prior conviction in another state for murder. Was pardoned by the governor of that state. Was later paroled in Iowa. Parole was revoked and he was returned to prison. Finally was paroled and discharged and is now in business in another state. Has a home, wife and children, and his general conduct is approved.
22. (Female) Manslaughter. Raised in a houseboat on the Mississippi river. Parents notorious. Killed her paramour. While in prison she studied stenography and when paroled she attended business college and later held a position as stenographer with one firm for five or six years. She is now married, they own their home and appear prosperous. She was discharged from parole in 1913.
33. (Female, colored) Breaking and entering. Parole period spent as a domestic. After discharge was married and was respected up to the time of her death. She gave much of her time to work among the people of her race. She was discharged from parole in 1914.
34. (Female) False pretenses. Served a term in another state prison for like crime. On parole was permitted to return to her home town where she was employed as a seamstress and did well; is now married to a locomotive fireman.
35. (Female) Larceny. Discharged from parole in 1915. Prior to her conviction had gone bad morally. After her discharge she entered a hospital in training as a nurse and is still in that employment.
36. (Female) Prostitution. She and her husband were convicted at the same time and were but temporarily in this state before conviction. After release both were found employment with a large corporation and continued satisfactorily in that employ after discharge, in 1918.
37. (Female, colored) Larceny from person. A southern woman. Came north with no good purpose and soon after was convicted. Went into a home as a domestic on parole and later continued in service and apparently did well.

In these cases are presented a small number of the results which have followed the efforts of the state along a most worthy line of endeavor. When men and women who have menaced society and have been public burdens are encouraged to live uprightly and practice industry and virtue, our assets as a people are increased in those things most essential to the public welfare. But it is a sad reflection that in all that may be done there are instances of failure; although such do not represent failure of effort nor a weakening of desire to help and reform, but rather the meeting of conditions which modern society has not yet been able through all its agencies for good to fully analyze and successfully treat.

The work challenges the state to continued activity along the lines now followed, not only for the purpose of aiding and changing the purposes of those whose tendencies are criminal, who represent the reasonable restraints which good morals and the law place upon us all, but as a means of protection against the growth of crime, and of the larger development of a criminal class. Such efforts must be practical rather than sentimental; they must be kind but stern; there must be maintained authority in treating these cases and also a relation which creates confidence, with a feeling on the part of the paroled man that he and his case are receiving just treatment. The board of parole with its agents and assistants have been guided by this purpose.
