REPORT OF THE

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

Honorable John Hammill, Governor of Iowa.

Sir: In accordance with the provisions of the law, I herewith submit the twenty-seventh report of the Fish and Game Department, covering the biennial period ending June 30, 1926.

Respectfully submitted,

W. E. ALBERT,
State Fish and Game Warden.

W. E. ALBERT, Warden
Iowa Department of Fish and Game

FOREWORD

In submitting the following report to the governor of our state in accordance with the requirement of law, we never more distinctly realized the far-reaching claims made upon our department and the almost sacred charge committed to its care.

The fish and game of Iowa are a strategic and valuable asset, and more and more as the years advance will this be emphasized, especially in view of the compelling movement for wild life conservation that is not only gripping the consciousness of our own national life, but more and more lining up the countries of the world to an intelligent and drastic conception of its importance.

Hence, as representing a department holding in trust for citizens of Iowa the protection and welfare of its animated out-door life and always ready to respond to every legitimate call, we earnestly seek the co-operation of every dweller in our state in that which is a matter of universal appeal and concern.

And thus we trust the contents of this report will be carefully read to the end that there may be close and sympathetic action in carrying forward that which has so vital a bearing on our everyday life.

REPORT OF FISH AND GAME WARDEN

LOOKING BACK

It is now several years since the affairs of the State Fish and Game Department were committed to the care and direction of the present administration, and it seems not unfitting to briefly review some of the work accomplished during this period. Among the various centers of energy and activity functioning in our state, that of Fish and Game has a popular appeal and definitely so, when the growing interest of our country over in this respect presents itself to the mind, and we think in terms of what education in public opinion has brought about, and the avenues of inquiry it has developed.

Such a situation emphatically applies to our country as a whole, and we find its manifestations featured throughout our entire Iowa life. As this is the case, no apology is needed for looking back a few years and noting what they have meant to us. If progress has been the result, satisfaction will be forthcoming, while at the same time the experience arising from this should have a beneficial and helpful effect in formulating plans and purposes for the years to come.

An outstanding factor at the time the Department passed into the hands of the present administration was the financial situation, which has since been satisfactorily adjusted.

Naturally that part of general arrangement and supervision which has to do with engaging and locating deputy wardens over the State is a matter requiring special care in the selection of the right type of men and then instructing these, so that in the district they supervise while ever alert to discover and prosecute the law-breaker, at the same time they will be recognized as a factor in the community contributing to its general and everyday welfare. It is the Department's wish and endeavor that first of all the deputy shall be friend and adviser in the community in which he lives in all pertaining to its out-door life so that every resident may enjoy what he finds around him, subject to the reasonable restraints the law imposes. Recent years have shown a general improvement in the personnel of deputy wardens, and this may be expected to still further advance as a natural result of the policy pursued.

Owing to the general topographical character of our state most of its land has come under crop cultivation, with a corresponding elimination of brush and cover so necessary and desirable where game may breed and propagate. To help this condition about a year previous to the present administration taking charge, land had been leased near Des Moines and preparations made for the breeding of wild birds in captivity, looking to the stocking of state areas from this source, but up to that time few birds had been reared. Since then the ring-neck pheasant has been experimented with so successfully that during three days in the month of October, 1925 an open season in several counties was permitted for shooting the birds and much interest aroused. Wild turkeys are now being raised at the Game Farm and next season we may have a supply for distribution.

A material advance has been made by the department in fish culture during its administrative term. Whereas several years ago there was only one hatchery in existence and that for pike perch at the Spirit Lake station, another has been in operation for hatching the same species of fish at Clear Lake, and so successfully that next year the intention is to double the provision for output. The Spirit Lake station is also producing more than it ever did. In addition a plant for the production of trout was provided at Lansing and next season the new hatchery in the Backbone State Park will be ready for work. This plant is an ornament to the park and will be a definite acquisition to the state's fish-hatching facilities.

The increase of black bass in the waters of Iowa is much to be desired and in this connection the department has been particularly active. Artificial provision for the propagation of this product of our waters has to be pursued in a different way from that of pike or trout through the preparation and locating of breeding ponds, where every provision is made to contribute an environment that will produce the best results in an abundant production of bass fry.

And in this connection, a natural bass breeding tract in the northeast section of the state, has been given special attention. Here there is a shallow area bordering and fed by the Mississippi known as Big Lake, comprising nearly 800 acres and the department has acquired land by this which establishes practical control and supervision of what is perhaps the finest natural bass hatchery of our country. The general body of water in Big Lake has been deepened by the raising of its banks and an artesian well sunk where a continuous flow has the effect of oxidating the water, while in winter this protects the fish from freezing conditions.

Bass breeding ponds have also been constructed in the Backbone State Park, giving additional value and interest to this preserve while supplementing what has been carried out in the plant established for the hatching of trout. It is especially fitting and appropriate to be able to turn the facilities of this park area to the hatching of native and other fish, as the acquiring of the park was made possible through funds contributed by the department's treasury.

During the period we are reviewing, the volume of fish-rescue work along the Mississippi, which furnishes an important addition to fish resources has greatly increased and crews are now engaged the entire summer and fall season operating along the boundary and inland waters of the state.

An important enterprise has developed in Iowa during recent years in the matter of setting aside certain areas known as state parks where, as far as possible the natural conditions are maintained this being of a distinct value for scientific and recreative purposes. A large number of such places have been established and the legislature has given the department the right to declare these game refuges or sanctuaries, as also any other property of the state which the state warden may consider suitable in this respect.

In accordance with the authority thus granted three lakes, Round Lake in Clay county, Virgin Lake in Palo Alto county and Little Gar Lake in Dickinson county, have become permanent sanctuaries for all time where no game birds or animals can be killed. These areas have been improved by food plantings. Then there are the generous areas represented by the Backbone, Keosauqua and Dolliver state parks which afford much desired refuges for the wild creatures the department seeks to protect.

A special feature of the department's activities for a number of years, has been the annual exhibit at the state fair Des Moines, which has been very effectively promoted and increased.

Beginning some years ago with a few specimens of game and ornamental birds this exhibit has been materially increased by the introduction of attractively built aquariums where Iowa's native fish can be seen swimming at ease in full view of the visitors as they pass. Other features have been Virginia deer and such animals as the fox, raccoon, opossum and skunk. Again, large collections of birds' eggs have been shown as also mussel shells from Iowa waters, the last named having a specific economic value because of the pearl button business and its manufacturing.

The activities of the department have, during recent years, been demonstrated at the fair in other ways through talks on wild life culture and out-of-door conditions illustrated by stereopticon and moving pictures. These have been presented in a tent specifically adapted to the purpose.

A CHANGE HAS COME

Looking back through the years that have passed and what has transpired in the general advance and broadening of all relating to fish and game, it is more than evident that what at one time was recognized as just a political side line has become a department that, in general importance, stands in the forefront of state interest and economy. We would draw special attention to this and emphasize its appeal and general status.

In the old days what "fish and game" did, exclusively engaged the attention of the hunter and angler, knights of the gun and fishing pole looked on the department as representing their private preserve created and run for their benefit alone, and where the non-sport could look over the boundary but was not expected to interfere with anything going forward on the main floor.

But this has all been changed and greatly to the benefit of the sportsman. Today the department functions as holding in trust for the state of Iowa the living creatures of the out-of-doors, whether of the land or water. In the main, we want these creatures increased and materially increased, and it is a happy circumstance for everybody that the number of persons living in Iowa who want this increase is growing.

Among these living creatures are certain species known as game animals, game birds and game fish, and the progressive citizens of Iowa wishing to see these in abundance have no small interest in the work the department is doing as trustees for and guardians of these. And these progressives while never hunting themselves yet are anxious that their neighbors who carry a gun or cast a line shall find the game when they seek it. Moreover, the hunter takes out a license and through this secures a privilege far in excess of the money invested. All that the state expects of the sportsman is loyal compliance with the law.

To ensure the nature lover his pleasure to the full when he goes for a ramble and to provide the hunter and fisherman something satisfactory for his bag and reel, calls for united effort on the part of our Iowa citizenship and the State Fish and Game Department seeks to function in this connection every day and all the time.

IOWA'S SPORTSMEN

In common with other parts of the country, Iowa has achieved a meritorious record in sportsmen's organizations whose object is the promotion of what is beneficial in the interest of fish and game. We are glad to recognize this as where such a company of men exists under efficient leadership and getting together at regular intervals and for the intelligent discussion of matters associated with the out-of-doors, material benefit must follow. Particularly will such benefit be experienced and emphasized if the sportsmen be sufficiently enterprising and broad visioned to feature in their programs, not only what actually bears on the activities of fishing and hunting, but what has to do with the environment of these.

In other words, we refer to the general subject of the conservation of out-door life which is legitimately and very fully what belongs to a sportsman's program. It is a sportsman's program because so closely bound up and associated with what a sportsman deems of the first importance. The man who wishes to fill his creel with game fish without taking too long to do it, and where he is generally satisfied with the recreation that a few hours' wandering gives him by the stream's side, knows full well that good fish are the result of their environment.

Not only are satisfactory regulations required bearing on the number of fish that may be taken in one day, the size of these and the period of the year during which they may be taken, but the streams in which they swim must be cared for too. Their waters must be kept free from the introduction of poisonous and filthy matter, their course must be left winding in order to provide them the sheltered nooks needed for breeding and general welfare, while trees and verdure must be cultivated along their banks for shade and moisture.

Do not conditions somewhat similar exist where the hunter seeks the bag limit of the birds he hopes to secure either in the woods, swamps, or on the water where an abundance of cover, reed and food plants are so necessary. He is intimately interested in all this because he knows that the wild creatures he is after cannot exist without them.

All this therefore provides an inexhaustible field for investigation and research on the part of both angler and hunter, and in the stated gatherings of sportsmen's associations, will furnish unlimited and never ending opportunity for debate and exchange of view. And as this opens up the broader vision of wild life conservation in general to our friends, so will it tend to increase the number of women in these assemblies, very desirable from every point of view. A gun may have no attraction for these ladies, they may even detect no urge in a fishing pole, but the beauty of the out-of-doors and how to protect it will have a strong claim upon them.

We expect more from the sportsmen's clubs than ever before, as we are brought in contact with their functioning in our State. They are now engaged in bridging a chasm formerly existing between the conservationist, neither a hunter nor angler, and the individual who, while loyal to the law is interested in taking for himself what the law gives him. There is no reason whatever why these two should not unite in the most thorough manner for the increase of game in our covers and fish in our waters.

Where the sportsmen and their organizations can be of special assistance to the Department is standing solidly back of its administrative activities throughout the state generally. The recent years' records of the Department have shown it to be the sportsmen's best operating friend, and in response to this there never should be the slightest question of their loyalty.

Sometimes of course, certain action of the Department may be subject to criticism and very properly so, it is not infallible. But when, as has been the case, there are members of a sportsmen's association who wish a thing done, while those of a similar organization clamor for the opposite being done, some people must inevitably be disappointed. But when a decision is once made, let the parties as a whole abide by it loyally and support the executive just as readily as if every individual got exactly what he wished. Unswerving loyalty to the Department will further just exactly what the great body of our Iowa sportsmen stand for.

THE SEINING OF ROUGH FISH

At times, among our friends, the question has been asked why the seining of rough fish is carried out in the winter, as they have thought that in the interest of this activity generally, this would be best done in the spring. Our reply to this criticism is, that seining of the rough fish naturally interferes more or less with the game fish and this would react on the latter more unfavorably in the spring than the winter, because the spring season is the period of spawning when the fish are in a more delicate condition and cannot resist disturbance so well. From long experience and investigation we find winter undoubtedly to be the best time for seining the rough fish.

Again the question may be put, in the assigning of contracts for handling these fish why not distribute them a little more widely and give persons an opportunity to engage in the work who live close to where the seining is done? This may seem all right on the face of it, but in order to get the best results it is necessary to negotiate with men who are accustomed to the work, who have the satisfactory equipment to carry it out and who can do it at a reasonable figure, and such men as these do not always live where the seining is done.

NEVER STRAIGHTEN A STREAM

Unless conditions are most unusual no legitimate excuse can be advanced for the straightening of a stream. A stream is winding according to nature's own plan for many reasons. It is necessary that the water it transports along its course should travel comparatively slowly in order that moisture be retained in the land through which it flows, and in order that the general level of the water in the surrounding country be not reduced. Recent years have, through indiscriminate drainage, so lowered the water level of the Mississippi valley of which Iowa forms a part, that serious and damaging changes have resulted.

The straightening of a stream, in the eliminating of its nooks and corners, robs the fish of their natural spawning places and thus prevents their breeding and replenishing the element in which they live, a very important factor. Straightening a stream means the cutting away of timber and other growths along its banks needed to keep those boundaries intact, so that the soil does not erode, with the effect of breaking down these banks and fouling the water. This involves a loss to forestry and native plants which is to be deplored.

A stream straightened is a stream lost and gone, as all that is left is a bare, unsightly ditch or drain.

Whenever circumstances of an unusual character arise which would seem to justify the straightening of a portion of a stream, not only the wishes of residents contiguous to this section should be consulted but all concerned along its entire course, as such change and interference may affect such course in other sections. And then a final provision of safety would be ratification by the State Executive Council.

WORK IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The general character of the work of the Department has a direct bearing on the public schools, not only because the boys and girls cannot be too soon educated in what has to do so directly with the definite welfare of our state commonwealth, but the charm of out-door life is such the subject appeals to the very youngest. And whatever is done in the way of instruction for the young folks will appeal to them at a period when they are most susceptible to this and thus stand a double chance for a permanent impress in later life.

THE CULTIVATION OF TREES

Notwithstanding the continuous inroads made into the cutting down of our natural forests and the ever increasing prices of lumber, comparatively little has yet been done to meet the situation by a systematic course of re-planting in Iowa. On most farms and farm holdings there are bare places that can be planted to trees where a two-fold advantage would be gained. In the one case, the immediate environment would be much improved in appearance, a decided advantage, and in the other a crop would be growing which would eventually pay a satisfactory dividend on the original investment.

On some holdings there is much land that is doing nothing and a systematic effort made over the State to utilize such areas, large or small wherever found, would be a fine economic enterprise as well as contributing in other ways greatly to the benefit of Iowa's wild life interests. This would help conditions having a direct bearing on an increased supply of fish and game birds which is naturally a matter of vital importance to the Department.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT

For Year Ending June 30, 1925

Prior to October 28, 1924, when the Code of 1924 became effective, the receipts of the department were placed in the Fish and Game Protection Fund and the Boundary Waters License Fund, both of which were drawn upon by the department. There were, however, two items of revenue collected by the department which were not available for its use as the law specified that these fees, namely, Mussel License Fees and Deputy Game Warden Fees, should be credited to the State General Revenue Fund.

Under the revised code, 1924, the Boundary Waters License Fund was abolished, the balance therein at the time the new code became effective
