FREEDOM ROCK TOUR

Local artist set to complete patriotic rock project

Scott County Freedom Rock, Le Claire

Ray “Bubba” Sorensen is known by Iowans for many things. Some recognize him as the owner of Sorensen Studios, the photography business he started with his wife, Maria. Some recognize him as an elected state legislator for House District 20. But most recognize him for his renowned Freedom Rocks.

The unique Iowa legacy that is the Freedom Rocks began with a boulder situated between Menlo and Greenfield that was often a victim of local graffiti artists, much to the communities’ dismay. In 1999, Bubba, an Iowa State University alum and former graphic designer, reached out to the communities and asked if they would let him paint a mural over the spray paint.

With the communities’ permission, Bubba completed a mural of the Iwo Jima flag raising to honor veterans, but, when the mural was painted over by graffiti artists, local veterans asked him to come back and recreate the mural. From there, painting the boulder became a yearly tradition where Bubba would honor veterans with a new creation in time for Memorial Day.

This experience and Senator Chuck Grassley’s 99 Counties Tour encouraged Bubba to set off on his own personal journey to recreate the original rock in every county. For the next several summers, he traveled the state, visited a select community in each county and spent one to two weeks creating a mural that told a story about local veterans.

These boulders quickly came to be known as the Freedom Rocks and garnered a large following from Iowans and Midwesterners alike, who began taking road trips to see each one. Bubba’s hard work and passion for Iowa veterans also earned him a place in the Iowa Wrestling Hall of Fame, where Dan Gable awarded him the Outstanding American award in 2019. The Freedom Rock Tour is slated to conclude in fall of 2021 when the 99th boulder is completed.

But it doesn’t stop there. Bubba announced that he will be painting a 100th rock, giving Iowa communities the opportunity to bid for having the boulder in their town with a percentage of the proceeds benefitting a veterans’ charity.

Though his journey across Iowa will soon come to an end, Bubba’s artistry continues across the country. He started the 50 State Freedom Rock Tour and is booking gigs across the country. He has already completed murals in neighboring Wisconsin, Minnesota and Missouri as well as Washington state.

FALL COLOR TRIPS AND TIPS

Add a splash to your fall color trip by visiting some of Iowa's wonderful waterfalls.

WONDERFUL WATERFALLS

Dunnings Springs, Decorah

The waterfall is in Dunnings Springs Park, just off Ice Cave Road. It's a short and easy walk from the parking lot.

Siewer's Springs, Decorah

Technically a spillway located in Siewers Springs Park, the falls are easily accessible and located near a parking lot.

Malanaphy Spring Falls, Bluffton

Getting to this spring-fed waterfall located northwest of Decorah requires a two-mile (round-trip) trail hike along the Upper Iowa River.

Beulah Springs Falls, McGregor

Located near the entrance to Spook Cave Campground, the falls are just to the north, on Bloody Run Creek.

Backbone State Park Spillway, Dundee

Walk the West Lake Trail or drive 129th St. through the park for a view of the spillway. Backbone State Park beach will be in the background.

MacBride Falls, Solon

Although this waterfall is technically a spillway, the rock formations still make it an impressive site. The spillway is located between Lake MacBride and the Coralville Reservoir and is an easy hike.

Dunnings Springs, Decorah

Briggs Woods Waterfall, Webster City

A series of short drops on the Boone River, this waterfall is a short hike from a parking lot and viewable from the paved Boone River Recreational Trail that goes through the park.

Beed's Lake Spillway, Hampton

Claiming to be the most photographed dam in the Midwest, Beed's Lake Spillway is a short walk (over grass) from a nearby parking lot off Beeds Lake Drive.

Willow Creek Waterfall, Mason City

The Willow Creek Waterfall can be viewed from the State Street bridge between 1st St. NE and S Carolina Ave. The waterfall itself is located on private property – please obey all posted signage.

PLAN YOUR FALL COLOR TRIP

Weather throughout the fall season has much to do with the development of fall color in trees. Cool night temperatures destroy chlorophyll quickly, but below freezing temperatures inhibit production of red pigments. The brightest displays of color occur with an early fall of bright sunny days and cool nights, which result in excellent conditions for development of red pigments.

When do the colors peak? On the average, peak fall color occurs in Northeast Iowa on the weekend closest to October 10. Peak fall color occurs later in the more southern parts of Iowa; however, it all depends on variable conditions. Perhaps the most important thing about fall color is taking the time to enjoy it.

The Iowa Department of Natural Resources produces weekly fall color reports, typically starting in late September. Find them posted at iowdnr.gov or traveliowa.com.

Beed's Lake State Park, Hampton

TREE COLOR KEY

Walnut: Leaves turn bright gold and are often the first to drop in the fall.

Ash: Green ash leaves turn golden yellow, but white ash leaves have a purplish cast. Ash leaves fall after walnut trees, but earlier than those of oaks and maples.

Elms: Elm leaves turn various shades of yellow. Some turn brown before falling, while others fall while still yellow.

Hickory: Leaves turn yellow, then turn brown before falling.

Silver Maple: The leaves of soft maples turn yellow but do not turn brown before falling.

Sugar Maple: Brilliant flame-red hues are the signature of hard maple leaves. The red pigmentation of some leaves breaks down before falling.

Bur Oak: Buff to yellow colors predominate. Leaves typically remain on the tree and turn brown before falling.

Red Oak: Red oaks have brilliant red leaves in fall and typically hold their color into early November.

White Oak: White oaks have a more subdued, purplish fall color. Leaves then turn brown and often stay on the trees until new leaves begin to grow in the spring.

Photo tips and tree color key reprinted with permission from Iowa Outdoors magazine, a publication of the Iowa Department of Natural Resources. To subscribe, visit iowadnr.gov.

For the best photos of fall colors, shoot on overcast days when lighting is even, soft and won't wash out the bright colors. In fact, the warm colors of fall leaves contrast and "pop" against softer light. For best photos during brightly sunlit conditions, shoot early and late in the day to take advantage of a warm sidelight beaming through the trees. And don't just focus on the trees - the forest floor come late autumn is strewn with colorful leaves juxtaposed against mossy rocks, calm water and gnarled tree roots. Besides trees, look for mushrooms, bright colored shrubs and tall grasses as they take on warm hues.

Just blocks from each other are the Waterloo Center for the Arts, John Deere Tractor & Engine Museum, Phelps Youth Pavilion, Sullivan Brothers Iowa Veterans Museum, National Wrestling Museum, and everything on the grounds of the Grout Museum District.

6. Main Street, Cedar Falls

Downtown Cedar Falls, located just off Old 20, features shops, restaurants, hotels, breweries and museums. If you're looking to break up your cross-state trip, this is an excellent midway point for an overnight.

7. Public Gardens, New Hartford

The city of New Hartford decorates its town park beautifully all year long. Plan a break here with some snacks or lunch and complete some relaxation time before getting back on the road.

8. Parkersburg

A 2008 tornado ripped through the city of Parkersburg causing a wake of destruction. Pictures of the day 13 years ago show an Iowa town all but destroyed and heartbroken. However, Parkersburg is a testament to civic pride and endurance. It's a model for how a community can come together and help rebuild their hometown. You'll want to experience this city for yourself and absorb its achievements while you're there.

9. Iowa's Most Robbed Bank, Austinville

Yikes! Austinville is an unincorporated community with an infamous history due to its lonely bank in rural Central Iowa. The bank, opened in 1911, survived seven robberies and attempted robberies between 1922 and 1985. It's now a small museum and an obscure part of Iowa history on this historical route.

Historic Route 20, Sioux City

State Theatre, Holstein

The Fort Museum and Frontier Village, Fort Dodge

10. Raging Thunder Bull, Ackley

Another roadside sculpture for your checklist! A huge bull welcomes you to Ackley, a town that's technically in four counties (Hardin, Butler, Grundy and Franklin). The local meat shop is right next door, and the facility sits in two counties at once! Confused yet? That's ok because that's the fun part. Just before the bull, Old 20 goes through only 3,900 feet of Franklin County. That makes that North Iowa chunk of highway the shortest patch of Historic Route 20 for a single county in America!

11. Swinging Bridge, Iowa Falls

Time to stretch your legs across the Iowa River and enjoy one of Iowa's most beautiful riverfront communities. The rocky bluffs supply Iowa Falls with a scenic destination anytime of the year.

12. The Best Town by a Dam Site, Alden

Iowa's spillways and dams provide travelers with plenty of opportunities to load up their cameras and smartphones with pictures. Get your photo by the Alden welcome sign and tell everyone you've been to "The Best Town by a Dam Site!"

13. Hemken Collection, Williams

The history of vehicles that have motored down the Iowa road is on display in the small town of Williams. The Hemken Collection is one of the most impressive of its kind and these beauties are slick! Admission is by appointment only so plan ahead.

14. Silo Mural, Fort Dodge

The tallest mural in Iowa is also one of the most spectacular pieces of public art in the whole country. Rising from an old grain silo is a towering depiction of Fort Dodge locals. You might just catch yourself walking around the mural multiple times to see it from several angles.

15. Rainbow Bridge Park, Rockwell City

Located directly on Old 20, one of the area's iconic Rainbow Bridges creates a perfect place to enjoy a break in quintessential rural Iowa.

Hemken Collection, Williams

16. World's Largest Popcorn Ball, Sac City

One of Iowa's can't-miss roadside attractions. Never turn down an opportunity to see a record breaker!

17. State Theatre, Holstein

Built in 1914 and recently renovated, the theater showcases a state-of-the-art digital cinema experience. A staff of volunteers take great pride in keeping this landmark operating and up to date. It's one of only 10 of its style of theatres remaining in the country.

18. Original Historic Route 20 Signs, Cushing

The quest to make this stretch of America's longest highway an official historic route in Iowa began here. The little town of Cushing was the first community to pass a resolution officially recognizing their own part of Old 20 and install the first two signs in the state.

19. Jog Down our Main Street, Correctionville

Another original town motto and fun welcome sign! The town was literally named after a correction in surveying the town. Correctionville is also the longest name for a town in the state. Get on those jogging shoes and listen to the sign.

20. Lewis & Clark Interpretive Center, Sioux City

It's fitting that America's most important expedition would someday see America's longest highway on its path. The Corps of Discovery explored much of the Loess Hills and the Missouri River Valley in Western Iowa. The Lewis & Clark Interpretive Center is one of the most important facilities in Iowa when it comes to illustrating our state history. Sioux City also intersects with the Loess Hills National Scenic Byway, Lewis & Clark National Historic Trail and Historic US Route 20!

STOKED ON SNOW

Winter offers spectacular scenery, challenging fitness sports and wildlife galore. Try an activity new to you.

When snowflakes lightly blow across the blanketed landscape with icicles twinkling at rooflines, don't cower next to the fireplace. Pack a thermos of steaming hot cocoa or soup and snacks in a backpack, dress in layers, grab the hat and mittens and head out to partake in an underutilized season.

Ice boating

Winter's strong winds are prime for sailing iceboats. Adrenaline-seeking ice boaters look for open spaces where winds sweep across miles of frozen lakes to take boats up to 60 miles an hour. Ice must be at least four inches thick and free of holes, heaves and fissures.

Iceboats are mounted on skate-like runners. The pressure of the stainless-steel blades creates a thin layer of water to glide on. Look for ice boaters in Clear Lake, Heron Lake at Raccoon River Park in West Des Moines and at Lake MacBride near Coralville.

If you get an opportunity, wear layers of winter insulation, coveralls, insulated boots, thick gloves and a snowmobile helmet with a full-face mask. Carry an ice pick, in case you must haul yourself out of water.

Sled for free or a small fee

You don't have to be young to thrill at sledding down a slippery slope. Some areas even help you get back uphill.

Sledding at Moorehead Pioneer Park near Ida Grove has a tow rope operated on Sundays from 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. A lift ticket is $2. A relocated train depot serves as a warming house. Named for the Moorehead family that operated a stagecoach inn in the 1850s, the park features the inn, hand-hewn barn with wood-pegged timbers and the Grant Center Schoolhouse.

Bring your sleds and inner tubes to "The Chute" – a notorious, incredibly steep hill – at Hitchcock Nature Center in Honey Creek. Snowshoes are available for rent from the lodge when there is more than four inches of snow on the ground. Entrance fee is $5 per vehicle; free sledding.

Horse Bend Recreation Area in Milford offers tube rentals and tow rope return for $10 per person per day. Regular hours are Saturdays and Sundays from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., depending on weather conditions.

Seven Hills Park near Jefferson has a free rope tow Saturdays and Sundays from 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. when there is at least four inches of snow cover.

Try cross-country skiing

Iowa offers great terrain for cross-country skiing, and the scenery is especially beautiful in parks. Many state and county parks offer clinics and rent skis to introduce folks to the sport.

Prairie Springs XC Ski Trails Cresco unit combs track on the main recreation trail set among views and superb displays of nature. Start at Prairie's Edge Nature Center two miles south of Cresco.

George Wyth Memorial State Park in Waterloo has three miles of groomed skate ski trails.

Big Creek State Park on the northwest side of Polk City has two and a half miles of trails groomed for skate and Nordic-style skiing.

Trek winter wonderlands on snowshoes

A snowshoe walk in the woods during snowfall is the closest thing to absolute peace in this world. Get an up-close look at nature and exercise in any snowy public area.

With many snowshoe styles for different terrains, it's best to borrow or rent. The first time, head out for 30 to 45 minutes, take a five-minute break, then follow your own trail back to your starting point.

Many county parks rent gear and give guided snowshoe hikes, so call county conservation boards for details.

Ice skating

What's more special than holding hands with a special someone under starlit nights, or helping a helmeted 4- or 5-year-old keep their balance on ice? Whether you prefer figure skates or hockey action, skating is an invigorating connection to the winter season.

Great outdoor skating includes the 15-acre lake at Pilot Knob State Park near Forest City, Jones Park or Noelridge Park in Cedar Rapids, Red Haw State Park near Chariton, Marian Park in Clear Lake, Brenton Skating Plaza in Des Moines and the Shrine of the Grotto of the Redemption in West Bend.

Wildlife Tracking

In daylight, follow animal tracks in the snow to find their watering holes, where they've slept—even what they've eaten by trailside scat. Look for wing prints in the snow, as well as hoof, feet and paw prints.

Night walks are about sounds. You'll likely hear hoots of owls as they warn others to avoid claimed hunting grounds. Hear coyote calls to gather the family pack. As they gather, more voices join with yips, yelps, barks and whines. If you get too close to a deer family bedded for the night, one will snort to warn others. Raccoons too, are active and vocal. Hear them purr, coo, chirp, whimper, snarl, growl, hiss, scream or whinny. An opossum may hiss if you cross its waddling path. Bobcats have a low-pitched growl and high-pitched scream—rare to hear—as their great night vision and hearing allows them to vacate long before you near.

Winter destinations

Whiterock Conservancy in Coon Rapids is popular for winter family gatherings with a five-bedroom home, rooms at the Garst Farmhouse and two cottages. Children enjoy the historic farm and pond areas. Trails are easy to walk and wildlife is evident. See snowy tracks of deer, rabbits, beaver, river otter, birds, field mice and waterfowl. Cross-country skiing, snowshoeing and hiking allowed on trails. View their bison herd clad in thick winter coats.

Honey Creek Resort State Park at Lake Rathbun in Moravia features cozy getaways. Kids relish the indoor water park and wildlife watching. Check schedules for ice fishing classes, or fish the boat docks where de-icers keep water open. Explore 47 miles of lakeside snowmobile trails that lead to the resort. Guided hikes include birding, animal caches and “winter wonderland.” A fireside program, “Nature Tales,” gives families a chance to enjoy a story while making s’mores—held outdoors weather permitting, or around the indoor fireplace. Monthly stargazing classes are held under clear winter skies.

Winter camping

No bugs, no poison ivy and few people describes winter camping. With a four-season tent to shed snow and wind, a mummy bag, an insulating, closed-cell foam ground pad and a fleece hat while asleep, winter camping can be comfortable—with great star viewing.

Yellow River State Forest in Harpers Ferry offers year-round camping at non-electric sites. The Paint Creek Unit has equestrian accommodations, fishing, hunting and more than 25 miles of trails for hiking, equestrian, cross-country skiing and snowmobiling. Ski the Luster Heights Unit’s groomed trails or backcountry ski through the forest.

Other parks for winter camping include:

Scott County Park near Eldridge
Wildcat Den State Park near Muscatine
Eden Valley Refuge near Baldwin
Pike’s Peak State Park near McGregor

Horse Trail Rides

Gazing across snowy fields, hills and forests from horseback is blissful. For a list of parks and forests that welcome equestrians and phone numbers to check trail conditions, search “equestrian” at iowadnr.gov.

Jester Park Equestrian Center in Polk County near Granger offers guided and unguided trail rides, and wagon and sleigh rides.

Take a buddy ice fishing

Walleyes, northern pike, crappies, bluegills, trout, yellow perch and even catfish are as exciting to catch in winter as any other season. Ice should be at least four inches thick, children should have adults with them, and never fish alone.

Most ice-fishing classes are held in northern Iowa. Check with county conservation boards or local fishing guides to find outings.

CULTURAL CUISINE IN SURPRISING PLACES

Leave your passport at home and travel the world with your palate in Iowa's cities and small towns.

Red Sea Eritrean and Ethiopian Restaurant, Ottumwa

Ronneburg Restaurant, Amana

Named after the medieval fortress in Hesse, Germany, this renowned Amana restaurant serves up delicious family-style German meals while also honoring the area's intriguing history. When a group of persecuted Germans emigrated to Iowa in 1855, they set up a collection of seven small villages in the fertile Iowa River Valley near Iowa City. The building that houses Ronneburg acted as a communal kitchen for the colony before officially opening as a restaurant in 1950. Today, Ronneburg serves tasty meals in five dining rooms with a home-like feeling that also features art created by local artists as well as historic photos portraying the Amanas nearly 100 years ago.

Café Beaudelaire, Ames

Since 1990, Café Beaudelaire has introduced the soul of Brazil to Iowans and Midwesterners alike. Located across the street from Iowa State University, this café's Brazilian fusion cuisines have earned it a special spot in current and former Cyclones' hearts. And the burgers are good, too, earning recognition as the best in Iowa in 2018. Today, the café's unique atmosphere, its soundtrack of pop songs covered in bossa nova and Portuguese dishes surprise customers and make this spot a truly one-of-a-kind find.

Schera's Algerian American Restaurant & Bar, Elkader

After meeting in Boston in 2001, avid adventurers Brian, a New Hampton native, and Frederique, who is of French and Algerian descent, decided to travel together. Frederique joined Brian on a trip home, during which the two visited Elkader and fell in love with the community, named after the greatest Algerian hero Emir Abd El-Kader. After growing tired of the constant rush of city life, Brian and Frederique decided to move to their favorite Iowa town and open a restaurant combining their two ethnicities. In 2007, Schera's Algerian American Restaurant & Bar introduced gourmet dining options to small town Iowa. Today, the restaurant remains a cultural destination for travelers and has been featured on NPR, the BBC, Iowa PBS and CNN.

Istanbul Grill, Fairfield

With a unique combination of home-cooked Mediterranean and American foods, Istanbul Grill offers the perfect eating spot for those looking to explore new cuisine. Try their popular kebab or falafel plates or experience the best of comfort food with their deep-dish pizza. No matter the order, this family-owned restaurant puts love and passion into every dish.

Jack's Pho House, Marshalltown

With its mix of Vietnamese, Laotian and Thai fare, it's easy for Jack's Pho House visitors to forget they are in the heart of Iowa. Serving Marshalltown fresh, homemade food since 2015, this restaurant specializes in customer favorites from pad Thai, curries, drunken noodles and spring rolls to 19 flavors of bubble tea.

Salvatore's Ristorante, Muscatine

When Reno Vitale and his wife Enza moved to Illinois and operated a successful small-town pizzeria, they discovered their love for the states and serving delicious food. The duo moved back to Italy after their children left home, but after a couple years felt the need to return to the U.S. They moved back, this time to Muscatine, and recreated their pizzeria called Roma's Pizza before passing the business on to their son, who renamed the restaurant Salvatore's Ristorante. Today, Salvatore's remains part of the Vitale family and features authentic Italian recipes such as fresh pasta al pomodoro, Sicilian pizza and Reno's famous Ribeye.

Nederlander's Grill, Orange City

A step through the door of Nederlander's Grill transports visitors back in time to a small village restaurant in the Netherlands. Honoring Orange City's Dutch history, this small-town restaurant serves up delicious Dutch dishes, including local favorites like pea soup, Dutch apple pie, Dutch fried potatoes, bread pudding and gourmet sandwiches. Their menu also offers Dutch trivia and vocabulary, as well as news articles telling the story of the community's Dutch settlement in the 1870s.

Red Sea Eritrean and Ethiopian Restaurant, Ottumwa

A newer restaurant to the Ottumwa area, Red Sea Eritrean wows guests with their delicious flavors of east Africa and made-from-scratch meals. This family-owned restaurant attracts foodies from across the Midwest, who compare it to similar finds in bigger cities like Minneapolis and Chicago.

Da Kao, Sioux City

In their native Vietnam, Mo Tran and his family experienced many hardships from financial stress to political unrest. Moving to the U.S. represented their shot at personal freedom and entrepreneurship. They relocated to Pittsburgh then made the move to the Midwest and got jobs at meatpacking plants before opening their own restaurant Da Kao in 1994. Serving Chinese and Vietnamese foods, the quaint café eventually grew to become the city's biggest and most successful Asian eatery, earning the Siouxland's Choice Award for "Best Asian Restaurant." This family-owned restaurant's authentic Asian dishes such as pho, Vietnamese pork noodle soup and Chinese favorites draw and impress hungry visitors.

Delicias Bakery, Storm Lake

Located in downtown Storm Lake, Delicias Bakery offers a taste of Hispanic culture and a feast for the eyes. Owner Diego Diaz loves sharing traditional Mexican favorites like marranitos, a pastry with a texture somewhere between a cookie and a cake, not too crispy nor overly soft or sweet. Coming from a family of California bakers and a childhood in Michoacán, Mexico, Diego fell in love with Storm Lake's Hispanic population and small-town atmosphere, which encouraged him to add his own flair to the community. Not only does the bakery serve delicious pastries to the local community, it also runs a two-day delivery route to stores throughout northern Iowa and southern Minnesota each week.

Kaffe Geita, Story City

Meaning "the coffee goat" in Norwegian, Kaffe Geita goes to great lengths to honor its Scandinavian culture and history. According to an Ethiopian legend, goats are credited with discovering the effects of caffeine after being energized following the eating of specific berries, which were then harvested and turned into a drink. While the Story City café doesn't serve these berries, their high-quality coffees, pastries and daily lunch specials leave visitors buzzing with energy.

GOOD FOR THE SOUL

A bookstore for everybody

Soul Book Nook, Waterloo

As an only child who spent a lot of time at her grandmother's house, Amber Collins often discovered worldly experiences and emotions through the pages of books. From an early age, this passion inspired her dream of one day opening a bookstore and being surrounded by stories. When the COVID-19 pandemic hit, she felt it was finally time to bring her dream to life and create something to offer hope and love during a difficult time.

Along with her online natural soaps and oils business, Collins started a bookstore on wheels just as schools and businesses across the country were closing their doors. With poster signage in her window promoting the book business' delivery and curbside pickup options throughout the Waterloo area, the mobile shop temporarily served her needs while searching for a physical location. When a location opened up downtown, it felt like the perfect match.

“IT’S A JOURNEY, OUR SOULS ARE A JOURNEY, AND THESE BOOKS ARE A JOURNEY INTO SOMEONE ELSE’S MIND, HOW THEY THINK, THEIR CREATIVITY. ANYBODY CAN COME IN HERE AND FIND THEMSELVES AND WHAT THEY’RE INTERESTED IN. THIS BOOKSTORE IS FOR EVERYBODY.”

“I felt that God’s spirit gave it to me just to show that during these chaotic times, we can still build and dreams can still come true,” Collins said. “I wanted something that could show people a phoenix rising out of the ashes. As a humanitarian, I felt it would bring the community together and be a space for people to heal their souls.”

And so the Soul Book Nook was born at 110 E 4th St. in Waterloo. With an official opening in September 2020, the bookstore was brought to life by Collins and her daughters, who together built and painted the shelving in comforting earth tones and designed the layout. Though the store's shelves and tables are full of books of all genres along with her natural soaps and oils, Collins' ideas for the space haven't stopped flowing.

Since its opening, the store has added seating areas for people to hang out as well as a coffee shop selling hot drinks and simple pastries, creating a relaxing and welcoming environment. Additionally, the bookstore has a growing Facebook event calendar including a range of events from coffee gatherings, STEM events, visits from authors on book tours and live musicians, sometimes including Collins herself.

The bookstore and Collins' passion behind it have earned the business a strong support system, both locally and as far as the state of New York, drawing well-known authors like Rachelle Chase to visit in person and offer a live reading, and Gwen T. Samuels to visit virtually with a social media performance. As the word continues to spread and more readers visit the store, Collins hopes to bring on a few employees alongside her daughter to staff the store so she can maintain the mobile delivery service and focus on even bigger goals for the future.

"We're adding to it every week. I want to get to the point where our customers feel comfortable when they get here and it becomes a place they suggest to their friends," Collins said. "It's a journey, our souls are a journey, and these books are a journey into someone else's mind, how they think, their creativity. Anybody can come in here and find themselves and what they're interested in. This bookstore is for everybody."
