MANPOWER INFORMATION FOR AFFIRMATIVE ACTION PROGRAMS

Area Coverage

The statistics included in this brochure are for the geographical area listed on the cover sheet. Individual brochures are available for the entire state and all counties.

Recruiting areas for different types of workers can vary. In general, most local employers recruit their workers and most local workers are employed within an immediate area. However, the labor market for some professional, managerial, and blue-collar shortage occupations is generally much broader geographically, with recruitment often conducted on a state, regional, or national basis. For such occupations, possible manpower resources in nearby areas or elsewhere should also be considered in setting Affirmative Action Program goals.

Statistical Data and Their Significance

The tables which follow are designed to provide labor market information to assist employers in evaluating utilization of women and minorities in their work forces and in establishing goals to improve such utilization.

All of these tables contain total figures which are broken down into female and minority components. Each table contains a particular type of statistical data that will be further explained below.

Table 1

This table contains population data from the 1970 Census. Spanish-American people, although considered a minority group, are not classified as a separate racial group. Spanish-Americans are included in Items 2 through 6, but are generally in the white race. Item 8 gives the total minority population which includes the racial minorities and Spanish-Americans. The labor force participation rate was obtained by dividing the number of people in the labor force by the population 16 years old and over.

This table contains labor force, employment, and unemployment annual average estimates for the latest year available. This information was obtained by extrapolating data for minorities and females from the trend of total employment and unemployment between the 1970 Census and the latest annual average. The labor force equals employment plus unemployment. The unemployment rate equals the number of unemployed divided by the number in the labor force.

STATE LIBRARY COMMISSION OF IOWA
Historical Building
DES MOINES, IOWA 50319

Table 3

This table contains the percent distribution of employed persons by major occupational groups and selected subgroups at the time of the 1970 Census. The first line of this table gives the most recent employment estimates (the employed column of Table 2). The 1970 percentages can be applied with relatively small error to these recent employment estimates. Changes in occupational distribution since 1970 are not believed to be great in most cases.

Manpower Resources

Goals for utilization of minorities and women should take into consideration all manpower resources which include the employed, the unemployed, and persons of working age not in the labor force. In considering the employed as a source for achieving Affirmative Action Program goals, an analysis of the company's own employees -- its internal labor market -- can assume great significance. For many employers their own personnel can contribute importantly toward correcting under-utilization of minorities and women in job categories.

Various external sources can be of help in nondiscriminatory recruitment. Some of these include high schools, vocational and business schools, colleges and universities, and the Job Service of Iowa.

Services to Employers

The Job Service of Iowa is prepared to assist employers in nondiscriminatory recruitment. Its trained staff can also provide technical assistance in job analysis and job relationships; personnel record systems; recruitment, selection, assignment, and promotion procedures; and identification of training needs. All the offices of the Job Service of Iowa have current labor market information and can advise employers on available publicly-sponsored job training programs including government-financed on-the-job training.
