iowa state university

Iowa State University is a major midwestern center of learning for students from all 50 states and more than 85 nations.

The university is the largest institution governed by the State Board of Regents and offers extensive curricula in agriculture, design, education, engineering, home economics, sciences and humanities, and veterinary medicine.

Iowa State's picturesque campus is highlighted by a central campus "park," and is a splendid combination of conventional and contemporary architecture in wooded and open landscaping.

The modern south campus is anchored by the Iowa State Center, the 50,000-seat football stadium, and the College of Veterinary Medicine. The center, built without use of state or federal funds, includes James Hilton Coliseum, J. W. Fisher Theater, C. Y. Stephens Auditorium, and the Scheman Continuing Education Center. The beautiful, spacious facilities host a variety of activities at Iowa State, including athletic contests, concerts, dramatic presentations, and lectures.

Sports play a vital role, along with academic endeavors, at Iowa State. The Department of Intercollegiate Athletics offers 19 men's and women's sports. Several Cyclone teams have been nationally recognized in recent years, and some have won national championships.

Iowa State varsity athletes also fare well in the classroom, and academic life is emphasized at all times. Tutor programs are available through the athletic department for athletes needing instruction in specific courses. Top scholars are recognized by the Athletic Council.

A native of Anoka, Minn., Renko received an associate's degree from Golden Valley Lutheran and a bachelor's degree from Sioux Falls (S.D.) College, where he was a nationally-ranked race-walker.

A respected clinician, Renko has staffed several track and cross country camps throughout the United States, including Olympia Sports Village, one of the nation's foremost running camps, located in Upson, Wis.

assistant coach

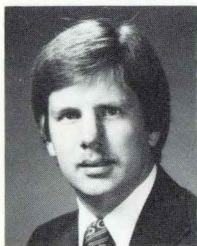

The Cyclones' strong reputation in the sprints and hurdles has continued due to the efforts of assistant coach Richard Lee.

Lee, 27, is in his third year at Iowa State, during which time he has coached one Big Eight 400m hurdle champion (Kim Whitehead, 1980) and had two others qualify for the AIAW national championships. Since his arrival in 1979, ISU marks have fallen in the 100m, 400m, and 100m hurdles.

Prior to coming to Iowa State, Lee was an assistant coach at South Dakota State University. The Jackrabbit men's track team won the 1979 North Central Conference title, and Lee coached several individual conference champions in the sprints, relays, and high jump. Two of his high jumpers qualified for the 1979 NCAA Division II national championship.

Lee has also coached high school track at St. Francis (Minn.) High School.

A native of Cedar, Minn., Lee is a graduate of the University of Minnesota-Morris.

sprints

This is a much-improved area for the Cyclones as speedy sophomore Colleen Hanna and a healthy Lorene Spearman return. Hanna is the school co-recordholder in the 100m (11.70), while Spearman, a highly-touted runner in 1978, seems to have shaken the leg injuries which have plagued her for three seasons. If she comes even close to her personal bests (10.4 for 100y, 23.4 for 220y), the Cyclones could have their best sprint corps in years. Adding depth are freshman Denise Bullocks and sophomore Jill Andersen.

For the first time ever, Iowa State seems to be stronger in the sprint hurdles than the 400m hurdles—seems to be. Sophomore Kelley Mathews broke former Cyclone star Debbie Esser's 100m hurdle mark last season and should improve upon her best of 13.94. She has company in rookie Nancy Roeller, a strong, graceful athlete who turned in a 13.97 clocking during her junior year at Lakewood (Colo.) High School. Roeller also is proficient indoors, with a best of 7.92 in the 60y hurdles.

Despite their noted accomplishments in the 100m hurdles, both Roeller and Mathews could be conference challengers in the quarter hurdles. Mathews finished third in the Big Eight last spring in 1:01.6, but it was her first quarter hurdle race ever. She also was seventh for the Midwest team during the National Sports Festival in Syracuse last summer. She will improve with experience. Ditto for Roeller. Junior Patty McCarthy has the most experience in the event, but may concentrate more on the 400m and 800m this year.

800m—Senior Wren Schafer is the Cyclones' top half-mile threat. She has gone 2:09.5 (relay split) and heads into her final season in the best shape of her career. She should shave her 800 mark even further. McCarthy was the third runner on ISU's 4 × 800m relay team last spring and proved equal to the task, despite not having run the event since high school. Before leaving for ISU last summer, Scotland native Catherine Hunter turned in a personal best of 2:13.2 during a national meet in her home country. She had a fine cross country season and should be a key performer this spring.

1,500—This could be Schafer's best event, according to head coach Ron Renko, but she has run the event competitively just twice. That will change this spring. Hunter (best of 4:33) and fellow rookie Sheila Wagner (5:04 for 1,600m) have come miles since the beginning of cross country season. They have the toughness to be solid 1,500m runners. She probably won't run it much this spring, but distance ace Dorthe Rasmussen does have a personal best of 4:13 in the 1,500m. She achieved the mark in 1977, the year she won the European junior national championship.

3,000—Wagner and Hunter are joined by yet another rookie, Margaret Davis, who was an all-American in cross country last fall. Rasmussen tops the ISU field with a best of 9:00.7, posted last summer in a race she lost to nonpareil Grete Waitz by two seconds. Davis has a best of 10:52 for 3,200m, and Hunter has been 10:02.9 for 3,000m.

5,000m—Rasmussen (15:48.9) heads the pack, but ISU displays good depth in this event with Davis, Wagner, freshmen Anne Hicks and Tonya Twillman, sophomore Francine Sandoval, and seniors Barb Rus and Ann Novak.

10,000m—Rasmussen's best of 33:09 ranked eighth on the Track and Field News all-time world list last year. Rus, Sandoval, Davis, and Hicks are additional threats.

field events

Throws—Junior Melanie Heitman and sophomore Connie White continue as the Cyclones' one-two scoring combination in the throws. Heitman holds ISU marks in the discus and javelin, while White has the second-best ISU marks of all time after one year of competition. White also set school indoor and outdoor shot put marks during her rookie campaign.

Jumps—The Cyclones are not deep here, but freshman Lois Groen and sophomore Jill Andersen have potential in the long jump. Groen won an Iowa state title last spring with an 18-8 leap. Andersen has gone 18-0.

1981: year of the comeback

The pack is back!

That is the oft-repeated phrase around Ames following the Cyclone women harriers' return to championship form during the 1981 cross country season.

Head coach Ron Renko's freshman-dominated squad won four of five regular-season meets (the loss came via a tiebreaker) before racing to consecutive victories in the Big Eight, AIAW Region 6, and AIAW national championships.

The national crown is the school's fifth since 1975—an unprecedented feat in women's intercollegiate athletics.

Iowa State also resumed its position atop the Big Eight Conference with its sixth conference title in the last seven years, and clinched its fourth AIAW regional championship since 1977.

The Cyclones began the year with a fresh approach and an almost entirely different lineup. Returning runners from 1980 included senior Wren Schafer and sophomore Francine Sandoval, but the remainder of the pack was young—in fact, all but two were rookies.

The 1981 pacesetter was former Danish internationalist Dorthe Rasmussen, who became Iowa State's second national champion with her stellar performance (17:36) over a rough, hilly course in Pocatello, Idaho. Her time was more than 30 seconds under the old Highland Golf Course record set last fall by North Carolina State's Mary Shea, and was a good 13 seconds ahead of runner-up Carey May of Brigham Young.

A highly-touted performer from the European ranks, Rasmussen lived up to all expectations. She won each of the six meets she entered, including the Big Eight and regional, while setting course records at home (16:54.7) and at the University of Minnesota (17:31.1).

While Rasmussen was first in six different races, freshman Margaret Davis was second in five, including the Big Eight and regional. Davis capped a phenomenal rookie campaign by finishing eighth nationally to earn all-America honors.

Scotland native Catherine Hunter shook off early-season illnesses and injuries to finish 18th nationally and become ISU's third All-American of 1981. Other national finishers were Sandoval (44th), Schafer (49th), freshman Anne Hicks (77th), and senior Barb Rus (117th).

What brought the Cyclones back to the mountaintop?

"Having a runner of Rasmussen's caliber was a factor, but I cannot say enough about the total team effort we displayed from the first meet of the year," Renko says. "We never had a letdown from any of our runners. We kept improving week by week.

"This was a special group of athletes, who were dedicated and committed to working hard from day one. They accomplished what they set out to accomplish, and are true champions."
