To gain profits in agriculture today, it's important to stay abreast of the latest agricultural news and information. Iowa State University provides up-to-date information and educational materials so you can take advantage of your key to profit—timely market information.

WOI-AM Radio, 640 Khz

Daily market news broadcasts by Extension Market News editor Doug Cooper and staff offer current futures and cash commodity prices, as well as information on factors affecting market trends, financial information, and options quotes. A one-half hour market and news magazine program from 12:30 to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday includes market analysis and interviews on issues affecting agriculture. For a free schedule, write Market News, 468 Heady Hall, Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa 50011.

Extension Marketing Seminars

Presentations and discussion of marketing alternatives is provided by Extension marketing specialists at locations near you. Contact your county Extension office or area Extension farm management specialist for further information.

Code-A-Phone Information

Code-A-Phone market information is available weekdays by calling (515) 294-6911 for futures information, and (515) 294-6899 for cash livestock information. Three-to six-minute taped messages prepared by Extension's Market News staff give a brief summation of current trends in the market.

EXNET

EXNET is Extension's dial-up information system. For a $25 yearly subscription fee and the cost of a telephone call, you can use your home computer and modem to access Extension information that includes up-to-date markets and weather. Iowa Farm Outlook, Estimated Livestock Returns and weekly livestock feeding projections are available on EXNET. For details, contact Deborah Coates at (515) 294-8658.

ISU Extension Software

Microcomputer spreadsheet templates and stand-alone programs designed to help farmers in economic decision making are available through ISU Extension Software Service. Software is available for Macintosh and IBM compatible computers. Contact ISU Extension software manager Deborah Coates at (515) 294-8658 for more information.

Iowa Farm Outlook

Extension specialists look at factors affecting the markets and incorporate them into the Iowa Farm Outlook Letter, which is published two times each month. Outlook economists Robert Wisner and John Lawrence analyze grain and livestock markets. Charles Gratto offers comment on agricultural policy.

Farm Marketing Home-Study Courses

This option offers a series of lessons on using grain options and a series on hog marketing and pricing alternatives. The lessons are prepared by Extension marketing specialists.

Estimated Livestock Returns

Each month, Extension outlook economist John Lawrence calculates profits based on current market conditions for cattle, feeder pigs, and market hogs. Livestock Feeding Projections include estimated break-evens and projected profits or losses from feeding feeder pigs, and feeder calves, steers, and heifers purchased and fed at prevailing prices.
