I. PROGRAM PROVIDERS

PROGRAM PROVIDERS: INTRODUCTION

Working with Program Providers

When arranging library programming with outside providers, you may find the following suggestions useful:

1. Be clear about your library's needs and expectations when talking with presenters.
2. Confirm your agreement and program details with the performer in writing.
3. Include thorough directions on how to find the program location.
4. Ask for additional staff or volunteer assistance during the program for crowd control and a smooth performance.
5. Plan for assistance to the performer before and after the program, such as unloading equipment, carrying supplies, and working out room arrangement and performance details.
6. Provide water and a glass for the performer.
7. Have payment for the performer arranged ahead of time.
8. Send a thank you letter after the program.

Program Provider Information

The performers listed in this directory may be useful for libraries planning children's programming for a variety of events throughout the year. The information in the listing has been provided by the performers. For more detailed information, contact the performers. Please remember that inclusion of this information does not constitute endorsement or promotion of any individual or group by the State Library of Iowa.

III. PRINT RESOURCES

PRINT RESOURCES: BOOKS

The titles listed here have been recommended by children's librarians for use in planning and presenting children's programs. The Bolded Titles are those you may want to consider first in developing a core collection of programming reference materials. Many of these titles are available on interlibrary loan from the State Library of Iowa. Request them through your regular interlibrary loan procedures, or contact:

IV. COPYRIGHT LAW AND THE SUMMER LIBRARY PROGRAM

Copyright Law and Libraries

Preparing for the Summer Library Program is an exciting and hectic time at your library. It's important to remember that some of the materials you use in your programming may be subject to the federal copyright law. Making copies of some printed material without the permission of the publisher, or showing commercial videotapes in your library, may be illegal.

Illegal use of videotapes and copies is subject to fines and other legal penalties. As information professionals, educators and librarians have a special responsibility to know and function within the copyright laws and regulations.

What's the Law?

How can you know what's legal so that you can make copies and show videos in your summer program?

Written Works

The copyright law (Title 17, U.S. Code) allows copyright protection for the life of the author plus 50 years. The author's protection begins as soon as the work is created. The author has the exclusive right to authorize the reproduction or adaptation of the work, and only the author has the right to perform, display or distribute the work.

Video Recordings

When video tapes are produced, the producers assign performance rights. These are either "For Home Use Only" or for public showings ("Public Performance Rights"). The label on the box or the copyright information on the first few frames will tell you what rights are granted with the rental or purchase of a videotape.

Library Programs Are Not an Exception

Under Section 107 - Fair Use, users of copyrighted materials also have rights. In certain circumstances, copying copyrighted materials is allowed, mostly for educational use in the classroom. Public gatherings for recreation and entertainment, including Summer Library Programs, do not meet the requirements for educational use under the law.

What You Can't Do

Do not show commercial videos labeled "Home Use Only" as entertainment to groups in your library.

Do not copy puzzles, mazes, pictures, project designs or anything else from books and magazines (even coloring books) without permission from the publisher.

What You Can Do

Fortunately, the State Library of Iowa and the Cooperative Summer Library Program make it easy for you to comply with the copyright law while providing a great summer library program.

Videos with Public Performance Rights

All of the audio-visual materials collected by the State Library of Iowa are purchased with "Public Performance Rights." Anything you order through the State Library's Media Catalog is perfectly legal to use in your programming.

Copying the Summer Library
Program Manual

It's also legal to copy anything printed in the Summer Library Program Manual for this year, and in past manuals published by the State Library of Iowa. Copying permission is granted when you acquire the manual and clip art.

Also, many programming magazines and books have a statement granting permission to copy the material found within.

Getting Special Permission

If you still want to make copies of printing or pictures from a book or magazine, or show "Home Use Only" video tapes to a public gathering, you may write, well in advance, for special permission.

Address your request to the publisher or producer and state how much of the material will be used, when and how it will be used, and the purpose for which it will be used. Include your name, position and address. Do not copy or show the item until permission is granted.

Professional Responsibility

It is important to know and follow the copyright law. Not only do we have a professional responsibility to do so, but complying with the copyright law sets a good example for the youth we work with.

V. LIBRARY STAFF RESPONSIBLE FOR CHILDREN'S SERVICES

Iowa Library Employees Who Work with Children

This section is a list of the employees in Iowa public libraries who are responsible for children's services. The list is arranged alphabetically by the name of the community in which the library is located. Job titles were provided by the individuals who completed the survey. If a library did not respond to the survey, the library director currently listed in State Library records is provided.

This list includes children's librarians, library directors of "one-person" libraries, and other library managers and staff who work with children. We have tried to be inclusive rather than exclusive. Because employees of the many small libraries in Iowa are responsible for a variety of library services, only a small percentage of library staff in Iowa who work closely with children have the specific job title "children's librarian."
